MEXICO VOTES 138 TO 0 TO BATTLE AXIS

Only Senate Endorsement Now Needed For Formal War Declaration.

ALMAZAN OFFERS AID

Free Press, Freedom of Speech Suspended by Unanimous Ballot of Deputies.

(By Associated Press)

MEXICO CITY—Routine senatorial indorsements alone were needed by President Avila Camacho today for a formal declaration of war upon the Axis powers and suspension of certain constitutional guarantees to combat "espionage and fifth columnism."

Bills authorizing the president to declare war and granting him extraordinary powers passed the chamber of deputies unanimously last night, each by a vote of 138 to 0.

Almost simultaneously the most important opposition leader, General Juan Andreu Almazan—defeated by Avila Camacho in the turbulent 1940 election campaign—offered his services to the president, "to defend my country wherever indicated."

Freedom of the press is one of 14 constitutional guarantees which would be abrogated for duration of the conflict, brought on by submarine attacks upon Mexican merchant ships.

It is understood the president plans to deal directly with the numerous Nazi-inspired or pro-Nazi newspapers and magazines in Mexico which have been attacking the United Nations' cause here for months and even trying to undermine public confidence in the government.

Suspended guarantees also would include the right of habeas corpus and injunction against arrest, freedom of speech, the right of public assembly, the right to move freely within the country or across its borders, the right to work

U. S. Seizes 300 Tons of Scrap On Shelby Farm

Antiquated farm machinery, 300 tons of which has been collected during the past 50 years by Allan Dick of northeast of Shelby, will be brought to Mansfield Monday to be used in the nation's war effort.

The scrap steel which has been requisitioned by the government after two months of controversy with the owner, will be delivered to Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, according to an announcement made by Roy F. Kenney, regional chief of the special projects section of WPB's bureau of industrial conservation in Cleveland.

According to Kenney, WPB agents located the scrap pile in March and undertook to have it moved. Dick, according to Kenney, accepted a bid which permitted him to retain 25 tons of his old parts business, but haggled over nearly every piece as the buyers attempted to take possession, making it commercially impossible to move.

Thursday, Kenney and Joseph Jovancsek, deputy U. S. marshal,

Parade Tops Memorial to Service Men

March Starts at 2:15, Follows Ceremony at Doughboy Monument.

Mansfield was ready this morning for city-wide observance of Memorial Day, an occasion which takes on added meaning this year because the nation again is at war.

Residents of the city today will place wreaths at the graves of soldier dead, and otherwise pay tribute to fighting men of other wars in traditional Memorial Day observance. But their thoughts will turn, too, to Pearl Harbor and the other familiar names of the new world war, and to the many Mansfield sons now serving their country on scattered battle fronts.

As usual, the high spot of the day's exercises was to be the community Memorial Day parade, set for 2:15 p. m.

The city committee which arranged for the exercises was to place emblems and wreaths at the cemetery at 10:30. At 11 the American Legion, the organization's auxiliary and the Legion drum corps were to participate in exercises at the Doughboy Monument in Central Park.

At noon, church bells were to

QUITO, Ecuador—(AP)—A former cabinet minister, an active army officer and two other men were under arrest today as alleged leaders of "a revolutionary coup" after police had fired into a group of university students attempting to storm the presidential palace last night.

A palace guard was killed and three other persons were seriously wounded during the shooting.

Those arrested were identified by police as Capt. Leonidas Plaza Lasso, an active army officer; his brother, Galo, a former defense minister; Dr. Antonio Quevedo, a prominent lawyer, and Col. Francisco Urrutia.

Robert E. Burns, 52, of 60 Stewart avenue, president of the Alta Lumber and Supply company, was fatally injured, and George H. Blecker, 50, Mansfield attorney and state racing commission member, was injured last night when their automobile ran into the center pier of a railroad viaduct on Cleveland avenue in Columbus last night.

Burns died at 1:30 a. m. today in White Cross hospital, Columbus, two and a half hours after the accident. Blecker was treated at the hospital for minor injuries and friends later brought him home.

Reports from Columbus said the automobile rolled over several times after striking the pier. Blecker got out of the car but Burns was trapped behind the steering wheel.

Car Kills Mother, Son On Crestline Street

A mother and her two young children were run down by an automobile last night as they walked across East Main street in Crestline and today the mother and her six-year-old son were dead. The second child was in Crestline Emergency hospital seriously injured.

The victims were Mrs. Charles Spayde, 44, and her son, William, 6, of Bucyrus street, Crestline. They received fatal injuries when an automobile operated by Arthur Paul Ritzhaupt, Crestline R. D. 1, struck them shortly before 10 p. m.

Mrs. Spayde and her children were crossing East Main street, according to Crestline police, and were struck by Ritzhaupt's car, after they had passed the middle of the street. Another automobile, going west, had slowed down to permit them to cross, according to police.

Both Mrs. Spayde and her son received skull fractures. Her other child, Charlotte, 7, was injured but not critically.

The Crestline deaths were caused in the only serious accident in the Mansfield area in the beginning of the Memorial Day weekend. Although restrictions on automobile tires were expected to cut into the usual holiday traffic, traffic experts looked for the biggest traffic week-end for 1942 to date.

GETS LIFE TERM FOR $13 MURDER

Madeline Webb Will Spend 29th Birthday In Prison; Co-Defendants Face Chair.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Madeline Webb, who will be 29 in three days, will spend this birthday and probably all the rest of her birthdays in jail, as the penalty for taking part in a murder that netted $13.

A jury convicted her last night of first degree murder in the March 4 robbery-slaying of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, but recommended mercy—that meant life imprisonment.

All her moans—"Please, judge, I didn't do it, please"—could not shake the verdict.

Her lover, Eli Shonbrun, pleaded for her, too. "She's as innocent as my mother, judge," he sobbed, even as the jury announced a sterner verdict for him.

Shonbrun and a third defendant, John D. Cullen, were found guilty of first degree murder without a mercy recommendation, automatically dooming them to death in the electric chair.

The three were convicted of

LAST CURTAIN FALLS ON LIFE OF BARRYMORE

Noted Actor Succumbs In Presbyterian Hospital At Hollywood.

HAD LIVED VIGOROUSLY

Member of Famous Family Kidded Self, Creditors On Stage, Radio.

(By Associated Press)

HOLLYWOOD—Gay, debonair John Barrymore, who lived life to the utmost and gave scant heed to the consequences, is dead.

The 60-year-old star of the stage, screen and radio, whose life was spent in the white glare of publicity, was almost alone when the end came at 1.20 a. m. (Mansfield time) Only his medical attendants and his brother, Lionel, were with him in his whitewalled hospital room when John crossed the border into death from the coma in which he had lain for hours.

In his last days Barrymore reembraced the faith of his birth. His physician, Dr. Hugo M. Kersten, disclosed that he had been given the last sacraments by Father John O'Donnell, pastor of a little Catholic church not far from the Hollywood Presbyterian hospital where Barrymore died.

Dr. Kersten said the immediate cause of death was myocarditis, a heart ailment, complicated by chronic nephritis, cirrhosis of the liver and gastric ulcers.

Barrymore, who had been frequently ill in late years, suffered his final collapse May 19. He appeared at a broadcasting studio for rehearsal that night, his face contorted with pain.

Barrymore came from his dressing room when the rehearsal was about to start, then staggered backward, tears of pain starting from his eyes.

To Rudy Vallee, who rushed to his aid, Barrymore said:

"I guess this is one time I miss my cue."

At the hospital he made a brave fight, but years of the gay life of which he often spoke jokingly on his radio programs, had taken their toll, and at no time did his

Beckmann to Get $8,000 For Job He'd Do For Nothing.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Harry T. Beckmann of Van Wert today started to receive $8,000 a year for the job he had offererd to do without pay.

The office of price administration yesterday named Beckmann to head its activities in Ohio. He served as state rationing administrator for three months at no salary and friends said he was willing to work on the same basis in the federal job.

Beckmann will continue to direct rationing in the state and when his staff is complete will administer price control.

Following notification of his appointment Beckmann declared he now was in a position to put rationing back on its feet in Ohio and would make recommendations for six executive positions and about 50 lesser administrative jobs.

VICHY, Unoccupied France—(AP)—Some 40 persons were killed and 100 injured in British aerial attacks on the Paris area from 2 to 4 a. m., the Vichy news agency said in a dispatch broadcast today. Six British planes were reported shot down.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—British bombers, resuming their attacks on German war industries in occupied France, again bombed the Gnome-Rhone airplane engine factory near Paris last night, it was announced today.

At the same time Hurricane fighters and Boston bombers were reported to have struck at other targets in northern France, blasting railways and setting fire to six freight trains near Lens.

The raid on the Gnome-Rhone factory was the sixth RAF assault on war industries in the Paris area in less than three months.

The Gnome-Rhone plant, situated in suburban Gennevilliers, was last attacked the night of April 29 by a large force of British bombers which were reported to have set devastating fires in a low-level assault.

The same factory also was the target of British air raiders on the night of April 5.

GAIN: Reds Destroy 54 German Tanks, Slay 2,000 Near Kharkov

BULLETIN

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts)—(AP)—The German high command declared today that the great battle of Kharkov was over, ended in a "proud victory of annihilation" for Axis troops, and that Russian losses had risen to 240,000 prisoners and 1,249 tanks captured or destroyed.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—The Russians announced today that Soviet forces had knocked out 54 German tanks and slain about 2,000 Germans in new engagements still apparently dominated by the Izyum-Barenkova sector fighting below Kharkov.

A Red army detachment destroyed 27 German tanks and about three companies of enemy infantry (perhaps 600 men) on a southwestern front sector, the Soviet information bureau said. The exact site was not announced.

Leningrad front troops were reported to have "wiped out 400 Nazi officers and men and destroyed several guns and heavy machine-guns and a number of blockhouses and dugouts."

A Soviet armored force, lashing savagely against fresh German attacks in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector, was reported to have destroyed 12 Nazi tanks and killed 300 enemy troops in a fresh phase of a battle now 11 days old.

The Soviet information bureau announced that both tank and infantry assaults were again beaten off in the Donets river bend salient below Kharkov, saying frankly the Russians were engaged in "defensive operations."

Red army gunners and airmen, some flying American-built planes, were credited with destroying 113 German aircraft in two days and Red navy forces chalked up the sinking of two more Axis vessels in the Barents sea—a 12,000-ton transport and an 800-ton trawler.

Moreover, the fliers destroyed or damaged 15 German tanks, 100 trucks, 35 munitions carts, two railway trains and two ammunition dumps Thursday, the information bureau said Germany was reported to have lost six planes that day in an ineffective raid on Murmansk, the Russians' Arctic supply port.

VENGEANCE: Nazis Step Up Toll of Lives for Assault

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—German vengeance for an assassin's assault on Reinhard Heydrich, the Gestapo boss of Czechoslovakia, took a rising toll of Czech lives today as his attackers still eluded Nazi clutches, but the man who is "Der Henker"—the hangman—to Europe's conquered people apparently still clung to life.

Swift court martials sent 12 more Czechs before German firing squads yesterday, raising to 18 the total whose lives have been taken so far, and the Berlin radio said four more had been condemned to die.

All those killed so far were residents of Brueann, in southern Czechoslovakia, and Maehrisch-Ostrau, near the old border with Poland. Four were women.

The same accusation was made against them all—that they harbored "people known to have participated in activities against German authorities." Their possessions were confiscated.

The other four, who apparently had not yet faced the rifle squads, included one woman said to be Jewish.

They were doomed on charges that they "were found in possession of firearms although they had known that by concealing firearms they had made themselves liable to be sentenced to death."

Although reports circulated last night that Heydrich had succumbed to the wounds inflicted

Teachers Do Graduate.

LOOKING back upon the teachers who tossed report cards at me during the years of my more or less formal education, I doubt if any of them has gone on to bigger and better—things.

Kilgallen

I mean I cannot imagine my history prof turning up as an entertainer at the Rainbow Room. I cannot picture the man who tried to teach me algebra press-agenting the figures of a batch of chorines; and I certainly never expect to see the photograph of a sourpus who taught me French, yclept Miss Brown, decorating the front cover of a movie magazine.

But such things can happen. Not to me, I guess, but they do happen, and I suppose when they do parents of offsprings who drew such interesting instructors are wont to say: "Well, can you imagine! Why I remember when Susie and Junior were in her class—and look at her now!"

Let's look at Madeleine Carroll, Bob Hope's favorite blond, because it's so easy. She was a school marm in England, and a gorgeous proof that beauty plus brains is a difficult combination to keep behind a desk or in front of a blackboard. Madeleine's chief embarrassment during her period as a pedagogue was the alarmingly unusual fact that more papas of pupils than mamas of pupils visited her classrooms. In fact, there is a rumor to the effect that when Madeleine taught school, a reward was offered to any little boy who was naughty enough to earn a letter demanding that his father come at once to see the teacher. But Madeleine says this is not wholly true.

Now that she's graduated from the classroom to the drama, Madeleine is no longer even vaguely the school teacher type—although she admits that when the film writers make her say words like "lousy" or "you bum," she winces.

But that's happy wincing, at those prices!

One of the nation's radio favorites, Phillips Lord, hit the school-teacher racket so well that he became principal of the high school at Plainville in Connecticut. It was the urge to pay higher income taxes that sent him to New York, and here he created the famous character of Seth Parker for the air.

Then the one-time teacher and school principal turned to chill-and-thrillers, and conceived such spine-tinglers as Gang Busters, Counter-Spy, and Mr. District Attorney. He's soon to shoot a new one at us—The Commandos.

None of my profs ever had that flair for excitement.

The Man Who Came To Dinner, Monty Woolley, was the favorite prof at the Yale School of the Drama, and no question about it, he could act—or so he always told the boys. A lot of professors teaching in English classes and dramatic schools probably think they could give the Barrymores cards and spades, but Monty—aha, Monty did it! He did minor parts with beards until at last came the greatest part for a beard since Savonarola: George and Moss wrote that beautiful satire on their pal, Alec the Smart.

So Monty left the blackboard and campus permanently, and is now happily picking plums in the arbor of Hollywood.

One of Monty's star pupils is now a pet night club entertainer—John Hoysradt, the mimic. You remember John did a turn for quite a spell in The Man Who Came To Dinner.

But of course there'd be no place for John in this potpourri if he hadn't sat behind a walnut desk in a schoolroom facing the well-known sea of shining pusses. But he has. President of the drama society at Yale, he was—as so frequently happens—unable to get a job on Broadway, so he went to Groton as a teacher of American history, for rent and fun money.

One week end while visiting New York he stopped in at a drinking place—the Weylin, I believe it was—and an old classmate who remembered John's talent for mimicry persuaded him to get out on the floor and perform. John did, Cole Porter (another Yale man) was ringsiding, and Hoysralt was in show business.

A quiet and charming man of our street came from the scholastic world of facts and figures to make his mark in the more glamorous world of faces and figgers—Bernard Sobel. He was professor of mathematics at Purdue when the urge to hunt the elusive dollar brought him to Broadway Street of Opportunity.

Strangely enough, he became Flo Ziegfeld's press agent in that exacting showman's period of greatest magnificence. The flamboyant Ziegfeld, somewhat of a tyrant to his show business flunkies, was put in his place by the gentle schoolteacher during the first week of the association. Ziggy had sent Bernard a scorching telegram—a characteristic Ziegfeld gesture. But (as had not happened before) it was returned to him the next day, with the grammar corrected in copy-desk fashion.

From that day on the showman and his professor-press-agent got along beautifully, with a minimum exchange of Western Union'd insults.

MAPS CIVILIAN DEFENSE PLAN FOR TEACHERS

Kalbfleisch Says Program To Be Started Training Them In Various Branches.

Mansfield school teachers, unable to attend summer educational courses this year because colleges are eliminating summer programs, will be given an opportunity to take civilian defense training.

Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the Mansfield civilian defense committee, said today that he was contacting W. L. Miller, superintendent of city schools, to ask cooperation in setting up a teachers' training program.

Judge Kalbfleisch stated that in a tour of several Ohio cities this week, he had learned from civilian defense authorities that school teachers were being included as an important part of the local defense plans.

"They will receive training as air raid wardens, plane spotters, and similar defense workers," said Kalbfleisch.

The civilian defense chairman explained that many colleges and universities have eliminated summer courses and that scores of school teachers will be available for civilian defense training.

Kalbfleisch pointed out that school teachers could serve as an important part in Mansfield's defense program because of the nature of their work.

"Not only do they have control of the children who must be directed during emergencies," said Kalbfleisch, "but they also have basic training which would make it easy to key them into the defense program."

In several cities, teachers receive special training to help care for school children during air raids. First aid courses and special blackout and air raid instruction is given to prepare them for emergencies.

CHARTER OPEN

Newly Formed Navy Club Now Accepts Memberships.

Officially functioning following an organization meeting this week, the Navy club—open to former members of the Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard, will keep its charter open for new members for 60 days, it was announced today.

Forty-five persons attended the organization meeting at the home of Mrs. Mary Leitch, 163 West Fifth street. Announcement will be made later as to a permanent meeting place, and persons interested in joining may contact Mrs. Leitch.

The organization, designed to assist in Navy relief and welfare activity, does not conflict in any way with the Navy Mothers club, Mrs. Leitch explained.

Youths now in the Navy may be enrolled in the Navy club and thus will be recorded as charter members when they finish service and return to civilian life. It is hoped later to organize an auxiliary organization.

MORE BECOME INSTRUCTORS

26 Men, Women Join Ranks of Red Cross to Give First Aid Training.

The ranks of Richland county's first aid instructors were swelled today by 26 men and women, representing industries and organizations, who completed their instructors' training course Thursday.

Classes conducted by Bernard C. Hardy, first aid director for the Richland county Red Cross chapter, were held at the Westinghouse, which had eight persons enrolled for the course.

Completion of the class increases the instructors' membership in excess of 160 and the group will be a part of the first aid instructors' club headed by Leland Powell as president.

Other officers recently elected by the club were: Joseph T. Geiger, first vice president; Allan Bond, second vice president; Miss Nancy Bushnell, secretary; and Mrs. Kathryn Bancroft, treasurer.

Presentation of instructors' service certificates to five persons each rendering a minimum of 300 hours of service a year was made by L. W. Birch, chairman of the county chapter.

Up and Down THE STREET

The Mansfield parents of a soldier-son now in Australia heard from scores of people they never knew existed before this week as the result of Private Richard Remy's broadcast from Australia. Although his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Remy, 146 Lexington avenue, did not hear the broadcast, they have been informed of it by both telephone calls and letters from persons throughout this section. A recording of the broadcast was made and a copy will be received later, the family has learned.

A woman who called The News-Journal yesterday wanted to know how it happened that she saw literally hundreds of feet of fire hose scattered about the Mansfield fairground when she had heard that fire department needs now hose and equipment. The question was a logical one so the fire department was checked. The hose, it was learned, belongs to the Barnes Manufacturing company which uses it in pump making, and it was drying in the sun after becoming soaked in shipment to Mansfield.

The muddy waters of Maple lake may not compare with a shimmering, crystal-clear pool for beauty, but the lake is affording as much fun as the "Old Swimmin' Hole" for boys in the southwest part of the city. The youngsters have some rafts on the lake and nearly every afternoon finds them rowing about the lake and splashing in the water. The lake had a muddy bottom and is fed by springs which keep the water roily.

PURCHASE OF $50,000 BLOCK SPEEDS DRIVE

Eliot Predicts May Quota For City, County Reached; June Goal $400,000.

Swelled by a last-minute $50,000 bond purchase by one of Mansfield's industrial firms, Richland county's total of war savings bond and stamp purchases in May was believed to have reached its goal of $295,200, it was learned today.

Although definite figures will not be available for a week, belief was expressed by Paul M. Eliot, county war bond sale chairman, that the quota had been reached. If the quota was realized, this will mean that the sale in the last half of the month was nearly twice that in the first two weeks.

The war savings staff for Ohio announced recently that Richland county's total purchases in the first 15 days of the month totalled $111,000 — considerably behind other counties of comparable population.

"The $50,000 purchase made yesterday and the increased buying of bonds generally in the last 10 days indicate that the county reached its quota for May," Eliot said. "However, the quota for June, which is to be announced in a few days, will be considerably higher, and our job will be much more difficult henceforth."

The treasury department's statement on future quotas indicates that Richland county's goal for June will be close to $400,000, and for July and later months will be near to a half million dollars.

Eliot said that workers will start tabulation next week of pledges made by county residents in the pledge canvass just completed.

He announced also that a meeting will be held in Mansfield, at the chamber of commerce rooms, on Tuesday, June 9, for presentation by Treasury officials to the county committee of an advertising and promotional plan to increase employe participation in the payroll deduction plan for bond purchases and to raise individual purchases to the desired 10 per cent of income.

Various flag and emblem awards will be made to company groups and individuals accomplishing the 10 per cent purchase.

Announcement also will be made next week, Eliot said, of a new treasury department plan for stimulating bond sales in various counties of the state.

Pre-Flight Study Considered By Cleveland Schools

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Cleveland's air-minded youth may be taking aviation courses by next fall.

Charles H. Lake, superintendent of Cleveland public schools, announced that a two-year course in pre-flight aviation would be submitted to the Cleveland board of education in time to permit beginning the course in September.

Lake said on request of the Ohio department of education, he had invited principals of all senior high schools in Cuyahoga county to attend the meeting next week in which aviation studies in public schools will be explained.

The Cleveland course, drafted by science, mathematical, and industrial art supervisors, contemplates teaching how an airplane is built, flown and navigated without a pupil ever getting into a plane. It would be given to juniors and seniors one hour a day.

appeared at the farm to serve papers on Dick and he left to see his attorney in Shelby. They served the requisition notice there, and warned Dick any further difficulty would lead to criminal action.

He will receive the ceiling price of $13.25 a ton for that type of metal and the Mandell Iron Auto and Wrecking company of Willard will start moving it to Mansfield Monday.

A clause was inserted in the papers, Kenney added, that the government is not liable if the old sheds in which the scrap is stored fall down while it is being removed.

Officials of wrecking company said yesterday it would take them about a week to 10 days to move the complete pile.

and protection against search without a warrant.

Avila Camacho's program left untouched the right of petition, freedom of religion and restrictions on the trial of civilians by military courts. The chamber amended the program in one respect, deciding against the president's recommendation for elimination of the constitutional guarantee of property rights.

The chief executive stated categorically that, in exercising the enormous powers requested, he would take every precaution to prevent their abuse and minimize disturbances to "the normal routine of civilian life."

General Almazan, on indefinite leave from the army, referred obliquely to his position in the public mind as the leader of the rightist movement when he said in a statement yesterday that, solely because of his "special situation," he believed it his duty to declare openly that he was "ready to defend my country wherever indicated."

Urges U. S. Supply Arms To Mexico

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the senate foreign relations committee said today the United States should take immediate steps to implement the good neighbor policy by providing any needed arms for Mexico.

"Of course we'll be glad to help Mexico in all proper ways," Connally told reporters. "We should give her arms, and help in every way we can without impairing our own war effort."

Connally spoke particularly of providing "what planes and small naval craft we can spare" for the campaign against submarines in the gulf, where participation of the new belligerent might be of much value.

As the Mexican congress gathered to vote a war declaration Connally predicted that Mexico's entry into the conflict would exert a "tremendous influence" toward lining up all the Latin American republics in combat against the Axis.

The foreign relations chairman saw more bad news for the Axis in Brazil's shoot-on-sight reaction to U-boat sinkings, which he said might have as great an effect in Latin America as Mexico's declared belligerency.

GETS LIFE TERM FOR $13 MURDER

killing Mrs. Reich in the course of robbing her of a $1,500 diamond ring. Testimony showed they never were able to sell the diamond, and that the sale of the ring's mounting netted only $13.

Shonbrun, who confessed to the murder in an effort to save Madeline, seemed more concerned about her fate than his own.

When the jury filed into the court room, Madeline, until then a spirited, defiant girl, struggled to her feet. Her face, her unrouged lips, were grey; her head and shoulders bowed. She leaned stiff-armed against the defense table, disheveled dark hair falling over her eyes.

As the foreman intoned, "we find her guilty," Madeline swayed for a moment, as expressionless as a waxworks figure.

Then Shonbrun broke into sobs, crying "you've crucified her. My God, my God."

Madeline, coming out of her daze, stretched her arms wide and moaned, "please, judge, I didn't do it, please. I beg you . . ."

Attendants quited Shonbrun's sobs sufficiently for him to hear his own verdict. Cullen, the almost forgotten defendant, who did not testify during the trial, was silent still when he was found "guilty as charged."

Later, when Shonbrun was asked to give his occupation, he yelled: "Murderer — just like Grumet," pointing to Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet, who prosecuted the three.

Madeline's mother, Mrs. Vera V. Webb, waited near the courtroom for the verdict. Hearing it, she mourned: "Oh, I don't know what to do. My poor little girl."

Former Judge James Matt Springer of Stillwater, Okla., who came east to help in Miss Webb's defense, expressed surprise at the verdict.

"Out where I come from, they would have acquitted her," he said.

Judge Jonah Goldstein set June 19 for sentencing. Defense counsel said motions for appeal would be made then.

The son, William, died less than a half hour after being taken to the hospital in an ambulance. Mrs. Spayde died shortly after midnight.

Mrs. Spayde and her son are survived by her husband, the daughter, Charlotte, and another daughter.

Authorities said that Ritzhaupt told them the Spaydes walked into the path of the automobile. Police said witnesses asserted Ritzhaupt was not driving at an excessive speed.

WANTS VOTE

LaFollette Seeks Early Action Of Army, Navy Pay Increase.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A campaign was started today to force a new senate vote on raising privates' pay from the $42 figure senators previously voted to the $50 a month approved by the house.

With a conference committee apparently deadlocked in efforts to compromise the $8 difference, Senator La Follette (Prog., Wis.) said that if action was not forthcoming quickly he would seek a quick test vote.

British Hold Line In Libyan Desert

BULLETIN

CAIRO, Egypt — (AP) — British general headquarters announced today that British armored and motorized forces "heavily counter-attacked enemy armored forces" about 20 miles southwest of Tobruk yesterday.

CAIRO — (AP) — Britain's 50-mile-long desert line, stretching inland from the coast at Ain El Gazala to Bir Hacheim, was said to be holding intact today as a great battle of tanks surged across the Libyan sands some 26 miles to the east in the fifth day of a new Axis offensive.

With units of tank forces operating like fleets of warships on the vast, open land ocean of the desert south of Tobruk, there still was no clear indication of the outcome.

Tobruk itself, which has come to be recognized as Nazi Marshal Erwin's Rommel's chief immediate aim, apparently still was safe as a British barrier to an Axis thrust into Egypt and the trend of the battle was giving the British new optimism.

The RAF's apparent ability to retain mastery of the air over Libya in the face of the Axis drive also encouraged the British. The fliers have been operating in close cooperation with British tank units slashing at Rommel's supply lines.

One of the first smashes of the Axis was at the British line south of Ain El Gazala but this was regarded only as a feeler or a feint while a wide end sweep skirted Bir Hacheim.

The Nazis, therefore, have turned the British flank and cut back northward to the coast in the region of "Knightsbridge," a desert trail junction, and Acroma, 10 miles from the sea.

American Fliers Blast Jap Posts

CHUNGKING — (AP) — Flying Tigers of the American volunteer group blasted strong Japanese positions west of the Salween river "with marked success" yesterday in a bombing and machine-gun assault, a communique said today.

The communique text:

"A strong flight of AVG planes carried out a heavy bombing and machinegun strafing on heavily fortified Japanese positions west of the Salween river yesterday afternoon with marked success.

"All bombs were seen to fall within the target area.

"Japanese anti-aircraft fire was successfully silenced. All AVG planes returned safely to their base."

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—IF you drive.

By the time that five-dollar automobile "use tax" payment comes due on July 1 motorists may be asking, "What's the use?"

Some cities are adopting an every-other-day milk delivery system—but the cows are sticking to the twice-a-day milking schedule.

Memorial Day's Purpose Revived

MANY of the diversions common to modern observance of Memorial day have been dispensed with this year because of war conditions—and it may be well for this solemn occasion to revert to its original intent—an outward expression of the inner feelings of those who are living toward those who have died, or risked their lives, in the military service of their country.

Memorial day this year takes on even greater meaning than in peacetime, for there is heaviness in many hearts over realization that lives of loved ones are in jeopardy—and in some homes war has already exacted its deadly toll.

Other than serious observance of a day dedicated to the high purposes of reviving memories of heroic men who fought in past wars, and expressing appreciation to those who have served, or are serving their country, is as inappropriate as an exhibition of rowdyism in a sanctuary.

It is regrettable that precedent has thus far held Memorial day to a fixed calendar date—May 30—rather than it should be regularly assigned to the last Sunday in May, as it seems better fitted to Sunday observance than to the sport and entertainment exploiting that has grown up around it.

Possibly, when this war is over and a new era of peace emerges, more people will be impressed with the idea that this is more of a holy-day than a holiday, and that it should be reserved as an occasion for sacred memories.

When Civilization Wanes

WITH both the Nazis and Japanese, it is often hard to tell whether they kill people for military reasons or just for the sake of killing. Presumably they have reasons connected either with immediate strategy or long-range objectives. But surely the men who do the actual killing, at the command of their superiors, must sometimes be in doubt as to the purpose and legitimacy of their slaughter.

Indiscriminate killing is probably easier for the Japanese than for the Germans, because they are so different from Europeans in their racial attitude and their respect for human life. Yet the Germans themselves, however kind-hearted in their normal living, seem to have been so hardened under Hitler that they are incredibly docile in carrying out savage orders. Civilians are often slaughtered en masse, without any evident purpose except that of inspiring deadly fear.

In former and more civilized eras, people everywhere would shrink in horror at crimes now commonplace. Hitler and his docile subordinates, not content with looting conquered areas of western Europe to the extent of $36,000,000,000 in cash and goods, have shot nearly half a million people in addition to all the strictly military slaughter.

Ride-Sharing and Horn-Honking

RIDE-SHARING, which is just getting into action locally, is already developing a bad feature which may be overcome if given attention at the start-off—as is being done in other cities.

How's the worker who is to share-a-ride to know that the car is out in front? Simplest way, of course, is for the motorist to honk the horn—once, twice, three times. And that is frequently done—regardless of the time of day or night.

But what about other persons in the neighborhood who are needlessly awakened from sleep by the horn-blower—possibly workers on a different shift who are just dozing off into badly needed sleep?

Horn-honking during the night, or in the early morning—and 5:30 or 6 o'clock is EARLY—evidences thoughtlessness and lack of consideration for others.

In one city it is suggested: "It isn't much of a trick for a driver to trot up to the front door to announce his arrival with a push on the doorbell, or it isn't too difficult for the rider who is being picked up to cast an eagle eye out now and then to watch for the arrival of his ride."

Anyhow, the idea of avoiding needless horn blowing merits continued emphasis, and it would be regrettable if the commendable share-a-ride movement should develop a nuisance angle.

Canada Warns Tourists

AMERICANS who own cottages in Canada and are accustomed to spending their summers there will get no gasoline favors this summer. Thomas Clark, dominion collector of customs at Windsor, Ont., across the river from Detroit, makes no bones about the matter.

"We are co-operating with the American government in this matter by allowing all American tourists, whether they be summer cottage residents or actual tourists, a maximum of twenty gallons for the summer. It's simply a polite way of asking them to stay home."

Ordinarily, the last thing Canadians want is for tourists to stay at home. They are equipped to give vacationers a good time and they need the money this brings in. English china, too, and many other things come back in the boats which go overseas with men, planes and munitions. The English need to sell their wares to carry on the war. Gas is precious indeed when Canada sacrifices tourist trade for it.

Those Fighting Poles

A CHEER for the Poles! Under the grinding weight of Nazi tyranny they still keep up their resistance. More than a hundred underground papers circulate, reaching 3,000,000 patriots. Many are letter-sized dailies printed in the farms and cellars around Warsaw and Cracow, and even in the forest of Warthegau.

Not all communication nowadays has to be written or printed. By radio, long-range bomber and parachute, the exiled Polish government in London has found means to reach its people and combat the propaganda of the Nazis. Every German misfortune in Russia is known, and helps the Poles to await the day of liberation. If the time seems long, they remember that their last period of servitude lasted over a century, and yet came to an end.

Memorial Day—1942

Place for Anti-Axis Propaganda

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

HAVEN'T we been derelict in failing to recognize propaganda's possibilities, as ammunition of our own against Axis countries? Our activity in opposition to it in our local midst testifies to our recognition of it as dangerous stuff, but we seem to recognize it only from our defensive standpoint. Wouldn't it be equally dangerous to the other folk, shot back at 'em?

We are somewhat more vulnerable than they are, because a lot of court proceedings involving delay and difficulty, are necessary preliminaries to corking up their broadsides into our midst, whereas an executive order, on a minute's notice, can stop up one of our barrages their way.

Nevertheless, it seems as if Yankee ingenuity ought to offset our handicap, at least partially.

The Axis' system has been to finance publication of a bunch of periodical papers in the United States, to disseminate their dope. I doubt that it takes very formidably, for I question that it's overly popular here. Still, it's irritating.

Foreign Language Papers.

We likewise have a few foreign language issues, survivals from the days when we still had plenty of German-Americans, Italians-Americans and others, who couldn't read anything but the tongues they were born to. These are too closely watched now to amount of anything, and, generally, I think they're decidedly pro-American also.

What it appears that we want is a modicum of liberty over the world's air communication lines.

And they can't be stopped, completely.

Folk who listen-in are subject to capital punishment, but it's clear that they do it often enough to raise hades from a publicity standpoint.

Senator Robert A. Taft's on record to the effect that "we can't win this war by words." Nevertheless, the Axis powers are trying to do it. It's well advertised that the Axis crew is endeavoring to accomplish it largely by that method.

It's known as "offensive diplomacy."

Illustratively, there's the Catholic Church proposition.

Cardinal Michael Cardinal von Faulhaber has leaked through the censorship charges of Nazi persecution by the Nazis of Catholicism in Nazilands. In Italy and Spain, where the church is strong, it's treated with some consideration, but in Germany, where Adolf considers himself predominant, it's interned.

Now, how about scattering some of this news about in the United States, where it'll do the most good?

Religion A Factor.

There's some more of it of a religious complexion.

The Japs aim to monopolize Asia's quality of it.

They've got their own brand.

"Let's be a bit qualified as to the Mikado," suggest the moderates.

"Emperor Hirohito is no nut," they alleged.

What the Japs want, it appears, is their religion over all Asia. There are a lot of assorted ones there. They've got a variation at home, but they want to boss the job.

Well, we haven't recognized how worldwide we are.

It's not only international. It's the church.

And it's inter-church.

That's what I'm trying to rub in.

I wish I could do it—German, Italian, Japanese and miscellaneous.

The world's got to be somehow fixed up in one way or another.

Listen World!

Old Saint Mary's

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

HIGH ABOVE the ebb and flow of the steel-armed Bay... above the clamor of the docks where the snarl of war rises constantly . . . above the constant enemy menace, the hills of San Francisco twist and tangle. And there at the corner of California and Grant, looming over it all, crowned with the perpetual beacon of the cross, stands Old Saint Mary's Cathedral.

Old Saint Mary's Cathedral, these may be just words to you. But to every San Franciscan, regardless of faith or blood, they are a part of his very life. For no church in that city of infinite moods has seen more pain and shame, more violence and agony, than this quiet haven whose doors are always open, day and night, without questioning.

Once Chinatown ringed it 'round and Little Pete, America's first Capone, boldly advertised the price of his killings on Dupont's brick walls and gilded balconies. Once it lay in the center of the vilest slave trade in human flesh the West Coast has ever known, and the rottenest political corruption. Its steps have literally been laved in blood. Its pews are dark with tears.

ONCE, and this is true, after an all-night shift of work I sought its peace as the dawn began, and there passed me on one side as I entered, a wrinkled old sinner, her raddled face wrung with an agony of remorse. And on the other side, his slippered feet flap-flapping against the cobblestones, his hands tucked into his blue sleeves, a high-binder—professional Chinese killer. I did not know their names. I did not need to know them. Their story was as old as the human heart, and like thousands of others, they had brought their pain to the peace that lies before the high altar of Old Saint Mary's.

So through the years it has stood until it is as much a part of San Francisco as the fogs and the wheeling seagulls and the gardens that rise in tiers above the bay. But the other day as I passed it there was something new.

Out in front, its stars and stripes flashing gloriously against the old brick, there hung a great American flag. Above, that lighted cross which is our hope; below, the flag which shall never fall, God helping us. And for a moment that faith of which we know so little, these days, burned in me like a flame.

Though I am no Catholic and, sometimes I fear not even a good American, to me these were symbols that went far beyond all human weakness . . . symbols that had lifted many a lost and broken man and women out of the gutters. The Cross, the Flag, and the Church . . . the open doors still unquestioning . . . the pews where any bewildered soul might kneel and find peace. And something more—

Timely Editorial

The Resourceful Farmer.

Predictions that agriculture would be handicapped by competition of city industries for labor and by lack of material to repair farm machinery evidently did not take into account the courage and resourcefulness of the farm population. Surveys conducted by the department of agriculture prove that food production of all kinds is seasonally well above the average and the future outlook is exceptionally promising.

Young men and women have been attracted to the city by high wages and promise of steady employment but neighborhood cooperation and rallying of women and children to aid in planting and harvesting emergencies have enabled agriculture to carry on. There will be no protest, for the farm folk have the needed courage and the emergency demands nothing that is not a farm tradition.—Detroit News.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Synthetic Rubber Holds Interest As Civilians Face Tireless Days

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THAT strange word, "Butadiene," cropped up again in the news, made its way into curbstone arguments, seemed headed for a place alongside "rubber" in American conversation.

Butadiene, basic ingredient for the principal type of synthetic rubber in the U. S., became increasingly important as one development after another pounded home to Americans the seriousness of the rubber shortage.

Most forceful warning, perhaps, come from the senate defense investigating committee. In a report that pulled no punches, the committee served notice that the army and navy might do well to cut down on rubber usage, asserted that if the synthetic program failed to come up to schedule the military forces "may find themselves without rubber at some future date."

The senate committee reported that there would be no new or reclaimed rubber at all for non-essential uses within the next three years, said that the synthetic program, at its best, won't do more than supply military needs and put tires on defense workers' cars.

From Akron, heart of the nation's rubber industry, came a similar story. Newspapermen touring the nation's war production plants stopped off there, heard the facts of the shortage and advised:

"Don't think or even wish for rubber because you're not going to get it, at least not before 1944, if then."

That, remember, is for civilian use. The armed forces will get all the rubber that can be made but even they should spread it as thinly as possible. The senate committee, which said the German army apparently is using less than 200,000 tons of rubber a year, pointed out that in the United States there was a "frenzied consumption" of 766,000 tons for all purposes in 1941, and suggested that military specifications might be too high in view of the concededly short life of some equipment.

Most optimistic hope among committeemen for synthetic rubber production in 1943 was 350,000 tons. A shortage of butadiene is expected until August of that year, but the WPB has decided to allocate 200,000,000 gallons of grain alcohol to make the substance.

Quotes

William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers: "This country has hit the victory pace and is putting the tools of warfare into the hands of our fighting men on a scale which makes victory certain."

Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric company: "Increased capacity, plus new interconnecting links with existing sources, will more than meet the country's power needs."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I'm going to tell you something about Al Gordon. He understands dogs better than anybody I know. All kinds of dogs. Breeds make no difference.

"I never ask a dog what his politics, color, or religion is," says Al.

That is why in his private life or in his professional career, which means the stage, you will find him surrounded day and night by hounds, terriers, bulldogs, spaniels, and mutts that are a blend of 20 different strains. He hangs around pounds just to buy homeless mutts who are unwanted and who are headed for the gas chamber.

I HAVEN'T got anything AGAINST pedigree dogs, but they're no better than street dogs," he says. "Of course, people who love pedigrees and blue ribbons better than they love dogs may have an answer to this."

Al's place on Long Island is a home for dogs. He has about 14. Three of these are on a pension and are retired. Each has a garden and a private little "cottage" of his own. The others still work with Al in the best dog act the stage ever saw. This act is at the Rainbow Room, and will continue there for at least six weeks.

It includes about ten dogs at the moment. Mixed dogs. Street dogs. Each one of them is smart as a tack. Al has dogs that can stand flat footed and turn 50 consecutive backward flips. They can leap upon swinging perches and balance themselves like cats. They can pick each other up and walk off the floor. They are comedy dogs who knock down all the hurdles they are supposed to leap over. They are trained to wander among the audience and make friends with the customers while Al screams in exasperation for them to come back and pay attention to what he is saying.

OF THE ten dogs currently in the act, only one is a lady. Al says he never strikes a dog. He never disciplines them. The nearest thing to a spanking any of them ever receives is a reproachful look, or a wave of a piece of newspaper he holds in his hands. Al Gordon thinks whipping a dog is altogether unnecessary. All it takes to train any dog to do anything is patience.

It may be that you have seen the Gordon melange of mutts in "Hurrah For What" on Broadway. It is better now than it was then, if that is possible. Maybe I just like dogs. But if I had to name the three most amusing things to see in New York at the moment, one of them would be that big ex-Hollander, Al Gordon, and his pets. There's not a blue-blood in the pack. Just pure dawg.

As Others See It

So Unreasonable.

People can be so foolish. We can remember when an unreasonable neighbor got mad because our sweet little child wrote his name with colored crayon on her newly painted house. — Kansas City Times.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"I don't want to cause any unpleasantness between you two, but I think that was a ball."

At Home

Pay-As-You-Go Stays Put.

Stalled, at least temporarily, was the pay-as-you-go income tax plan, with house ways and means committeemen wrangling over the advantages and drawbacks of having 10% of taxable incomes deducted from paychecks. Collections this year, opponents argued, would make it tough on taxpayers still scraping up money for 1941 payments. Besides, they said, although the original purpose of the plan was to help check inflation, it seemed unlikely that the plan could go into actual operation soon enough to help.

Moving along, though, was a bill to set up in the WPB a Smaller War Plants Corporation, with $200,000,000 in working capital, to help small business get into the production of war goods and essential civilian commodities.

Army Maneuvers.

Most troublesome of the questions confronting congress, perhaps, was a tangle on army and navy pay boosts, draft decisions, and allotments for dependents.

The house, after overwhelmingly rejecting its committee's recommendation for an army-navy pay boost to $42 and voting instead a raise to $50, found itself in an embarrassing spot. The measure came back from a conference committee with the senate's figure of $42 still on, and economy-minded supporters reminded opponents that its rejection might mean continued wrangling while service men drew the usual $21. But voting against the $50 level, congressmen howled, would be "political suicide," and sent it back to the committee still $50.

On the dependents' allowance question, the house military committee had approved a figure of $40 for a wife, $20 to come from the soldier's pay, $20 from the government, with $10 extra for each child. The senate allowances were $22 deducted from the pay, $28 from the government for a wife, with $12 more for one child and $10 for each additional.

Tale of Two Crashes.

In the Maine woods a forest fire watcher heard the sickening, last-gasp sputtering of airplane motors — and then a "terrific crash."

Next day searchers fought their way through the wilderness, found an Army transport plane all but buried in the swamplands.

The mangled bodies of six airmen were scattered about the lonely bog.

Same day, over bustling, thickly-populated Teaneck, N. J., two Army planes locked wings and collided.

Plane parts crashing through the roof awakened late sleepers, started fires; in a nearby garage two parked cars were wrecked.

Second Lieut. Lewis Bowen, one of the two pilots who parachuted to safety, suffered only minor leg cuts.

He was the only person even hurt.

Abroad

Libyan Let-Up Ends.

The Mediterranean war theater was roaring again, with Field Marshal Erwin Rommel hurling strong tank forces against the British in Libya for what London observers said might be the start of a drive for Egypt, then Iraq and the back door to the Russian Caucasus.

Both Germany and Britain had been busily building up strength for the next desert campaign, the Nazis pounding Malta unmercifully while they rushed reinforcements across the Mediterranean, the British building up reserves and training to avoid the mistakes of last winter's battles.

Britain had the edge in men and materials then. Whether they do now remained to be seen.

Important Visitors.

If the Nazis thought the arrival in Ireland of the largest American troop convoy of the war was just a bluff they probably had begun to doubt it after studying England's newest list of visiting guests.

Conferring in London with corresponding British big-wigs were chiefs of two of the U. S. Army's three commands, Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold of the Army air force, and Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, head of the Army's service of supply. Also present was Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of U. S. naval aeronautics, and a half-dozen other high-ranking men from this side of the Atlantic.

Just what the conference was about was prime stuff for speculation in London.

Soviet Strategy.

The mud of Moscow is barely dried up. Leningrad is a snow-splotched quagmire. But in the Ukraine, around the great steel city of Kharhov, choking dust covers the hot plains. The roads and fields are hard enough for swift armored maneuvers.

During the week the Russians and Germans, amid the swirling dust, have been locked in a stupendous see-saw struggle.

The battle opened with a Russian frontal attack on Kharkov proper. As Nazi reinforcements were sucked into the city's defense lines, the Russians struck heavily far below the city toward Zmiev and the rail junction of Krasnograd, slashed through for advances of as much as 35 miles.

Even if the Russians failed to gain all their objectives it was clear that they were achieving their objective of bleeding the German reserves at points chosen by Timoshenko.

Stilwell's Report.

"Vinegar Joe" Stilwell is the American that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek trusts so completely that he made him chief of staff of the entire Chinese army. As commander of both Chinese and American troops in Burma, Stilwell fought with his men until the battle was hopelessly lost; then he saved himself by marching with a few followers through 140 miles of wild Burmese jungle, marked on maps as "unsurveyed and unadministered," to India.

The leathery lieutenant general made no effort to conceal the fact that the Burma campaign had been an Allied debacle.

"We got run out of Burma and it is humiliating as hell," he said. But he added, "I think we ought to find out what caused it, go back and retake it."

He is going back to China just as soon as he has conferred with General Wavell, Britain's chief in India.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, May 31.

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is a very auspicious one for all manner of social, cultural and affectional activities, with many pleasurable as well as profitable engagements in such connection. But be alert to dangers, losses, theft or disagreeable entanglements while traveling, in correspondence or in money matters.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a happy and prosperous year in all those associations dealing with home, social, artistic and cultural developments or in such forms of business as concern these. In finances, business, writings, travel, agencies there are hazards of loss, theft, fraud and misrepresentation. Much activity and pleasure are seen in the affectional or romantic realm with possible engagement or marriage.

For Monday, June 1.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for rather fruitful and propitious culmination to ambitious projects, after some stubborn obstacles as well as surprising, sudden and strange circumstances are cleverly disposed of. This may occur not only by sound judgment, politic manipulation and the use of an enhanced magnetic personality, or by personal influence with those in power.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a successful and progressive year by the exercise of sound ideas and judgment as well as tact, finesse and attractive personality, when deceptive, peculiar or baffling situations menace. Strange situations may challenge sagacity and shrewd evaluation of difficult problems. In private life there may be a prospect of happiness and realized ambitions.

Mustard gas causes incapacitation by producing acute inflammation of the skin, eyes and throat.

Final meeting of the season will be held June 11 at the home of Mrs. Earl Boals, 120 Dawson avenue. Mrs. Robert Kern will be associate hostess.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

RONALD'S FACE, at my announcement, mirrored the "blank astonishment" so beloved by story writers. He fairly goggled at me.

"I never saw him," he said, "but I've heard him talked about, and there were only three men who went out of here with your father. Dr. Twitchell, who couldn't be Bickett; Professor Diswell, who is too old, and that other awful looking man. He's the only one of the right age, unless—that man who called himself Jim Watson, and left here just now?"

I shook my head in smiling negation.

"No, Ronald, Jim Watson is himself. The man who calls himself 'Charles' and poses as Professor Diswell's servant is my cousin, Jack Bickett."

"No!" Ronald gasped.

"Yes," I returned emphatically, smiling at him, but with a troubled doubt deep within me. Had I been wise in betraying the identity of my cousin?

Secret Must Be Kept.

The next instant I speciously salved my conscience with the reflection that I was not betraying Jack's confidence. I had discovered his identity and he had protested that I was mistaken.

"Now that you know this, Ronald," I said gravely, "I must caution you against betraying, even by the lift of an eyebrow, that you know Jack Bickett's identity or whereabouts."

"I shall be very careful," Ronald said earnestly. "I realize what is at stake in all this.

"Only—what can I do to help?"

"First," I told him, "to 'possess your soul in patience.' You feel reasonably assured now, don't you, of Marion's present safety?"

"As long as they can't find Jack Bickett?" he queried.

"Exactly," I told him. "And as for yourself, I imagine my father will wish to keep you near him, to use as a sort of errand boy."

"I can scrub floors or wash dishes," he declared. "I'm going to put myself at your father's beck and call in everything I do. But if there's anything you can tell me from time to time, you will, won't you?"

"You shall have every crumb of information I get myself."

"That is all I want," Ronald said emphatically.

'And now," I said briskly, "tell me about Carolyn."

"There isn't anything to tell since last night," he said. "She was very quiet and docile, hardly spoke a dozen words, and, as you know, I left the car at the first station beyond Dalemont and came on to New York. Uncle Dicky will have more news of her I fancy. When does he get in?"

"Not until very late tonight." I answered. "You are to be in bed long before then, for you need all the rest you can get."

"Very well," he said docilely.

And then I heard someone come into the next room, carefully locking the other room door behind him. The next minute my father appeared in the doorway.

"Professor Diswell's man 'Charles' is very anxious to speak to you, Margaret, about his master. Have you time to see him now?"

"The Authority on Authorities"

CROSSING THE DECLARER

Every defensive player against a No Trump game is conscious of the fact that declarer's side might have bid a major suit if it was held, whereas a considerable minor suit might have been concealed. Consequently, a major suit lead is usually preferred to one of the minor. Knowing this preference, we are now seeing occasional cases of smart players getting into 3-No Trumps without any sure protection against one of the minor suits, simply because they do not expect it to be led. The next stage of that evolution will come when we find a number of good players intentionally selecting a minor suit lead in preference to a major.

It was quite clear to West on this deal that his opponents had bid the two red suits, and that therefore a lead of one of the two black suits was indicated. Following time-honored custom in such cases, West led the spade 6—the unbid major. It takes no particularly fine imagination now to figure out how South got all 13 tricks, making an unbid grand slam.

If West had felt that South was taking advantage of his side's probable preference for a major suit lead, and had crossed him by opening a club, in the expectation that it might be his partner's long suit, the contract would have been set with five immediate tricks in that suit.

Examination of the deal shows that 5-Diamonds or 5-Hearts could have been made beyond peradventure of a doubt, considering the way that the opposing cards were located, but that is another story.

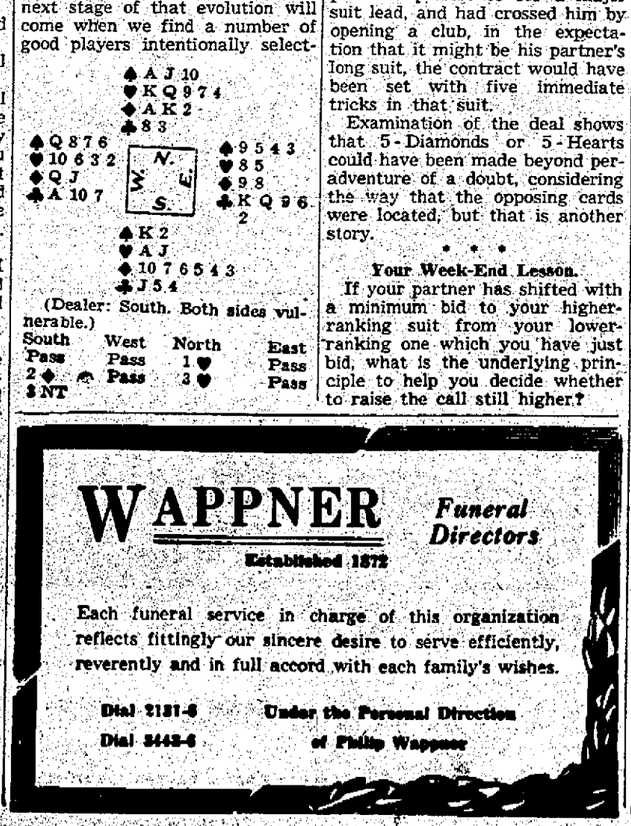
Your Week-End Lesson.

If your partner has shifted with a minimum bid to your higher-ranking suit from your lower-ranking one which you have just bid, what is the underlying principle to help you decide whether to raise the call still higher?



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

Ashland Girl Weds Doctor In Impressive Church Ceremony

ASHLAND—With soft candlelight on white ribboned aisles, cybotium ferns, white flowers and green palms, the marriage of Miss Pauline Elizabeth Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alpha B. Rogers, to Dr. Robert James Ferguson, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Ferguson, took place here Thursday night at Trinity Lutheran church.

Nuptial music for the ceremony was played by Miss Mabel Zehner, organist. The bride was escorted to the candle-lighted altar by her father where the ceremony was performed by Dr. A. H. Smith, retired pastor, and Dr. P. P. Anspach, pastor of the church.

The bride's long-trained princess-styled wedding dress was of white sheer marquisette made with a front panel of leaf pattern applique extending from the bodice to the skirt hem. The long sleeves of the dress were puffed to the elbow and tight-fitting from the elbow to the pointed tips extending over the wrists. The white orchid bouquet she carried was tied with long flower-knotted streamers.

Matrons of honor were Mrs. Paul Simmons of Ashland, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Melvin T. Hooker of Gates Mill. All wore white princess-styled dresses with colored bows down the back matching their Juliet caps of flowers.

FOOD PANIC SPREADING AMONG 300,000 ON OCCUPIED ISLANDS

CAIRO, Egypt — (AP) — Greek fugitives from four fabled Aegean islands have given the American Red Cross an account of starvation and desperation among 300,000 Greeks living under German occupation on Samos, Mitylene, Chios and Nikaria.

Their story, told to an American investigator who spent a week among the refugees in the Smyrna region of Turkey, was disclosed last night by Ralph Bain, head of the American Red Cross in the Mediterranean area.

Emaciated and yellow-skinned from hunger, 10,000 already have escaped by devious means, according to the report. The herbs which have become the islanders' main means of existence were said to be drying up under the hot Mediterranean sun.

Imported food which was the islands' principal source in peace, no longer arrives, fishing has been reduced to a minimum for lack of gasoline, drought has killed the vegetable gardens and what little else is produced goes largely to the German occupation troops.

"Unless food is sent to the islands soon," said the report, "a tidal wave of Greeks may break upon the Turkish shores . . . panic is spreading among the islanders as they see only death from starvation and they will get across somehow."

All four islands have their roots in ancient civilization.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

OPS Stresses Repair to Help Maintain Use of Appliances

"Freeze" On Electric Stocks Emphasizes Repair Need.

Wartime priorities may affect the sale of new electrical appliances but customers of the Ohio Public Service company already owning appliances have little to fear.

A service crew of eight employes under the direction of Service Foreman Merrit Giles is maintained to repair all electrical devices owned by OPS customers.

The war has made its mark on the service department's work too, because calls have increased more than 50 per cent in the past six months.

OPS still sells all types of appliances but governmental orders "freezing" manufacturers' stocks are expected to slow sales as stocks go down.

OPS specializes in service for its customers because it wants to give its customers the best use of their appliances.

"We're perfectly selfish about it," says Orlo L. Smith, sales floor manager. "When our customers are using their appliances, they're using electrical current. We want to make certain that our customers buy the best of appliances and get the best of service out of them."

Because of this, OPS operates a sales advisory service. If it is apparent that the purchase of a certain appliance will not benefit the customer fully or will increase his electric bill too much, his purchase is discouraged.

"We don't sell appliances just for the margin of profit we get from the sales themselves," says Smith. "We sell them because the customer will appreciate the radio, lamp, refrigerator or any other article and will get good service out of it."

With war priorities cutting heavily into stocks of electrical appliances being sold, the Ohio Public Service company is now putting emphasis on the repair of all old appliances so that they will be operative for the duration of the war. The company maintains a service department of eight repairmen. Small repair jobs are handled at the OPS service station but larger ones such as refrigerators or air conditioning units are taken to the OPS service garage. In the picture above, four of the servicemen are shown in front of one of the OPS repair trucks. Left to right are Jacob E. Augustine, Donald V. Hart, Donald O. Myers and Herman Baumberger.

Insure Quality.

To insure the customer good equipment, OPS sells only those items which have been tested in their laboratory in Cleveland. No manufacturer's word is taken for the quality in OPS merchandise. Actual tests are made.

But servicing appliances—not selling them—is going to be the important thing to consider this coming year.

Merritt Giles, Service foreman, has advised all OPS customers to check up on their appliances and to get their order for their repair in early. The heavy increase in the number of repair jobs is due to Mansfield area residents' efforts to conserve the electrical appliances they have on hand rather than replacing them as in former years.

One of the more common repair jobs reported at this time of the year is to correct the clogging of condenser coils in refrigerators. Giles pointed out that lint and other materials clog the coils, cutting down refrigeration and increasing current consumption.

Larger appliances are repaired in the homes but smaller appliances are brought to the service department. Although production of appliances has been curtailed, repair materials are still available.

"In some cases, there have been substitutions because of the restriction against the use of critical materials," says Giles, "but in most of these the substitute is as good or better than the original material."

Emergency Service.

Emergency service calls, such as leaky refrigerators, are answered as soon as possible. Other calls, not so vital, are handled by service men on regular routes. Even in these route cases, however, service is usually given the same day the complaint is received.

In most cities, electric companies do not supply repair service with the result that home-owners are forced to call in "handy-men" or high-priced electricians. The OPS plan affords its customers experienced service and guaranteed performance.

DRAFT SODA POP TO HELP NATION IN WINNING WAR

Owner of Weaver Home Supply Sees Need for "Soft Drinks" for Duration.

The lowly "five-cent soft drink" is being mobilized as part of the nation's wartime effort. J. Sherman Weaver, proprietor of the Weaver Home Supply company, 59 South Diamond street, predicted today that the "soft-drink" industry, essential to economic life, would continue throughout the duration.

Weaver made his statement based on facts compiled by the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages. The beverage institute pointed to the large per capita consumption among low-income groups.

"If we look to England," he said, "we find that the industry is regarded as essential, and, while they are operating under many restrictions, the industry is still producing beverages in considerable volume."

Weaver said the consumption of carbonated drinks not only embraced all economic groups, but also included the heavy demands of the various branches of the armed forces. Classed as neither a luxury or a semi-luxury, carbonated beverages, he said, are classed in the category of foods providing nourishment.

Despite the general increase in all prices of the past year, Weaver intimated that the industry, with 90 per cent of its products retailing at five cents, would retain the same price level.

"It has always been known," he said "that a breach in the five cent retail price would have a far-reaching effect, and for this reason it has consistently made every effort, in the face of rising costs, to maintain that level, and to date it has succeeded.

Mobile trailer laboratories of the Public Health Service are used to examine milk and water samples in some Army maneuver areas.

Termites Destroy Homes By Working Unheard, Unseen

The axis powers with their regimented populations highly organized to destroy the American way of life are no stronger organized than are the termite kingdoms which destroy thousands of American homes.

These tiny "enemies" work unseen and unheard and they often remain undiscovered by the property-owner until after they have done serious damage.

Within the past few weeks, one Mansfield place of business was forced to tear up the entire flooring of its building and to replace it with new flooring. Termites had eaten away the flooring from beneath until little more than a crust of the original wood remained.

Termites live in colonies with a highly organized social order composed of workers, soldiers and queens or productives. Their homes are air conditioned to maintain proper moisture.

The termintes undermine wood beams and other supports in the home or building in their constant search for the cellulose they need for food.

Uses Diner Menus To Urge Start of Victory Projects

One of Mansfield's leading restaurant proprietors, A. D. McNew, owner of Max Diner at 15 South Walnut street, is making it his hobby to urge all his friends and customers to go all-out for civilian defense.

"Its fun to do your part for victory," McNew tells his customers on daily menus. "Don't be behind the times! There are many things each and every one of us can do to help speed victory. Check the basement, garage, attic for salvageable materials such as newspapers, magazines, old clothes, pots, pans and implements.

"Start a war garden, big or little," McNew tells those patronizing his diner, in another issue of his menus. "Walk more, use your car less, carry your own packages. These are only a few of the ways we can serve and conserve to win the war."

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Hess takes a holiday. So do most of the rest of the guys in the editorial room, and the printers in the composing room.

Up at 4 a. m. and off to work we are this day so you can have your holiday paper in the morning before you dash off to that picnic, or round of golf, or fishing excursion, or ball game, if any, or whatever you do on holidays.

This isn't such a bad arrangement on most holidays, but when the holiday comes on Saturday, and there's still a Sunday paper to get out, about 2:30 Sunday morning, a guy is apt to lose a little peep on that nearly 24-hour stretch.

But that shouldn't bother me much. I can putt just as well on Sunday with my eyes closed as open. You think not?

So Hess takes a holiday. So, today, let's get out the shears and see what the neighbors brought in.

Ex-Brave Bob Kuzava is still undefeated with Charleston's Mid-Atlantic league leaders. The Sporting News shows him with two victories and no defeats, but since the national baseball paper's figure, Bob has chalked up another win.

And on that 2 and 0 record, the young southpaw whose jaw is still slightly askew from being broken last summer by a batted ball, has struck out 20 batters and walked nine.

Remember big Bill Craig from Newark, who copped the shot put at last spring's Mansfild Relays, and who was counted on as the mainstay of last fall's Newark football team until it was discovered he was ineligible for further high school competition in Ohio?

The Newark Advocate reports that Craig has just been declared the "greatest all-around athlete" in the history of Notre Dame academy at Chattanooga, Tenn., by a Chattanooga paper.

He played fullback in football, center in basketball, and was a one-man track team. He's reported considering either Notre Dame or Ohio State next fall, although several southern schools are after him.

The Fremont News-Messenger welcomes home Hank Miesle of last year's Ohio State league champion Green Sox, who has a cracked wrist in a cast after being hit by a pitched ball while playing with Springfield in the Mid-Atlantic league.

All the guy who threw the dust was Onachila of Charleston, who was released last spring by Fremont after losing a game to Mansfield.

The latest edition of the Chicago Cubs News, received here yesterday, has a picture of Mansfielder Johnny Barrett of the Pittsburgh Pirates, listed among the rookie aces of the National league, along with Frilan Fernandez of the Braves, Ray Lamanno of the Reds, Willard Marshall of the Giants, Dan Murtaugh of the Phils, and Stan Musial of the Cards.

* * *

Nothing like a few clippings to give a guy a holiday. And you may well say that today's column is my idea of a holiday, then I have treated myself to a lot of holidays in the past year.

And a happy holiday to you, my friends.

Chuck Byers Seems Bit Wild

ERIE, Pa. —(AP)— Behind the four-hit pitching of Bob Snider, Zanesville downed Erie 4 to 1 last night, halting the Sailors' drive to close in on first-place Charleston.

Charleston defeated Canton 4 to 1, despite nine walks allowed Senator pitcher Chuck Byers, who was relieved in the ninth inning. Dayton and Springfield did not play, having met in a double-header Thursday.

Games today: Springfield at Charleston; Zanesville at Canton; Dayton at Erie.

Blind Tom Gets Last Chance

But It's Not Umps Now, It's Tom Sunkel.

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Tom Sunkel is a 29-year-old lefthanded pitcher who is blind, or practically so, in his left eye and is getting his second, perhaps last, chance in the major leagues because the New York Giants are in such dire need of hurlers.

A few years ago Sunkel was one of the best prospects in the minor leagues, the king of the Southern association pitchers for Atlanta in 1938. The St. Louis Cardinals lifted him into the National league the following year, but a cataract resulting from a childhood injury by a playmate caused his vision to fail and the Redbirds let him go. He didn't show enough this spring for the Giants to make much use of him, either, his efforts being confined to three or four relief calls.

Yet today he is the toast of seven clubs in the senior circuit because he is the pitcher who has handed the swashbuckling Brooklyn Dodgers their last two defeats.

Manager Mel Ott of the Giants sprung him on the National league champs last Saturday simply because he was a southpaw, and he downed the Dodgers on seven hits.

Yesterday he pitched another seven-hitter at Brooklyn, this time over a ten-inning route, and whipped the Dodgers again 3-1. Sunkel had to be good because Ed Head pitched no-hit ball against the Giants for seven innings. New Yord nudged a run across without a hit in the seventh and after Harry Danning singled in the eighth to break the spell, Head gave way for a pinchhitter.

The Dodgers tied the score in the ninth on a triple by Arky Vaughn and a single, but the Giants scored twice in the tenth on singles by Babe Barna and Danning, a forceout and an error. Sunkel stuck to the finish to win his second straight.

The Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati Reds battled into extra innings for the second day in a row and the Cubs won again, 6-5, with a run in the 11th as Joe Beggs walked Pinchhitter Dom Dallessandro with the bases loaded. Claude Passeau was the winning hurler.

Rube Melton pitched a six-hitter for the Phils to beat the Boston Braves, 2-1. It was the Braves' third straight loss.

These Drivers Race Today at Ashland

Among the drivers appearing today in the midget auto races at Ashland Fairground are these favorites of the Akron Rubber Bowl and Sportsmen's park, Cleveland. Most of them will be piloting the sleek, fast Offenhausers.

The New York Yankees captured their 18th victory in 21 games, 16-1, at the expense of the Washington Senators. There were 17 Yankee hits that included homers by Joe DiMaggio, Buddy Hassett and Joe Gordon, but the sensation was Pitcher Lefty Gomez who made four hits himself while hurling four-hit ball. Gomez made only nine hits all last season.

A similar slugging show was staged by the Boston Red Sox at Philadelphia in beating the Athletics, 14-2, with Ted Williams smashing two home runs, one in the first inning with two on and another in the eighth with the bases loaded. They were his 13th and 14th of the year. Bobby Doerr also homered and behind this 13-hit barrage Tex Hughson pitched seven-hit ball to give the A's their sixth straight setback.

The Detroit Tigers tore into the Cleveland Indians for a 14-3 victory with big innings of three, four and five runs. One of them Rudy York's tenth homer. The Indians made 13 hits off Hal White, three less than the Tigers, but left 12 runners stranded

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK— (WW)— Three movie men, Louis B. Mayer, Harry Warner and Myron Selznick, have hosses entered in the suburban at Belmont today . . . Looks like a cinch for a photo finish . . . Ben Jones says he isn't afraid of any of the top-weighted nags beating Whirlaway, but if there is an upset it likely will be a lightweight that will scamper off from the rest . . . The ordinary 80-and-up golfers should strike a good many blows for the benefit of the Red Cross this week-end. The U. S. G. A. reports 3,706 Red Cross tournaments are on the schedule . . . Poetic General Phelan chose Thursday's Robinson-Servo fight as the time to serve them papers on Leon Rains, the Pennsylvania commissioner, in a $25,000 suit resulting from their disagreement over the Robinson-Servo fights that didn't take place in Philadelphia.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

Irvin Lisagor, Chicago Daily News: "As a rehearsal for possible air raids over Cleveland, the Municipal Stadium was blacked out for a minute during the sixth inning of last night's game. Only the umpires remained on the field and everybody graciously avoided an obvious remark about their being in the dark anyway"

SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

Joe Vaccarelli, the fight referee, reports that he shed 27 pounds during his basic training period as a Marine at Parris Island, S. C., and he's no lightweight yet . . . Jay Vessels, the AP scribe who has kept this column supplied with notes on sports doings around Minneapolis, took on a new job yesterday as Capt. Vessels of the Air Corps intelligence . . . Zeke Bonura would like to take a little time off from running the sports program at Camp Shelby, Miss., to organize an all-army ball team and play the Navy . . . Zeke thinks the soldiers would win in spite of Bobby Feller . . . Chet Gladhuk, Boston college's All-America, center who signed up with Gene Tunney as a boatswain's mate in the Navy, has applied for sea duty . . . They used to call him a whale, then a Tunneyfish, and now apparently he has decided he's about the right size for a destroyer.

QUOTE, UNQUOTE.

Joe Devine, Yankees' scout: "What counts most is spirit and character. Without those two things, no ball player will go far or last long. With them a player of fair natural ability may reach the top."

CLEANING THE CUFF.

On a postcard to a Seattle paper announcing that Tahoma high school had beaten Sumner to win the recent Sumner baseball tournament there was the note: "The majority of the Sumner team left a few days later for an evacuation center . . . Jean Stuhler, No. 4 "man" on the Queens college (Brooklyn) golf team, has three brothers who are pro golfers; but she says she models her game after Patty Berg's by studying movies of the Minneapolis miss . . . Ohio State's freshman baseball team has entered the Columbus Twilight Industrial league for the summer and several varsity players are expected to join the team when the spring semester ends . . . Fernando Garcia, who is touring the U. S. with Mexico's Atlante soccer team, cost $35,000 when the Atlantes got his contract from Barcelona, Spain . . . The Mexico team then sold him to Buenos Aires for $55,000 in 1940 and bought him back for $40,000 three months ago . . . Sounds like soccer's Bobo Newsom.

The Chicago White Sox made a spectacular surge of nine runs in the last two innings to come from behind and beat the St. Louis Browns, 12-8, after the Brownies scored six runs in the fourth inning. Don Kolloway came up three times with the bases loaded and belted in six runs with a double and two singles.

Ray Lamanno Explains How

Red Rookie Tells How He Became Star.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Six years ago a blocked placekick in a high school football game almost ended the athletic career of broad-shouldered Ray Lamanno.

The Cincinnati Reds' rookie catcher recalls how he blocked that kick—how he picked himself off the ground afterward and felt nothing but a dead weight where his left arm should be.

Every day for a week he soaked the arm in hot water. Eight X-ray pictures failed to reveal what was wrong. A bone specialist was called in.

"Osteomyelitis, inflammation of the bone,"—that was his verdict. An operation was performed, leaving a deep, trenchlike scar and the left arm an inch and a half shorter than the right.

"Army doctors took one look at that arm and put me in class 1-B, Lamanno said as he left for Cincinnati after playing in a series with the Cubs. "It's well healed, but severe cold makes it pain."

"I always was determined to be a ball player and after the operation I spent hours practicing to develop the arm. The shortness doesn't seem to bother me—in fact, I think it has helped. I seem to be getting a longer and more powerful cut at the ball than ever before."

The 23-year-old rookie from Berkeley, Calif., attracted the attention of Warren Giles, Cincinnati president, at Birmingham, Ala., with his throwing.

This spring he was put on the Reds' roster, becoming a third string catcher behind Dick West and Rollie Hemsley. Then one day in St. Louis he went in as a pinch-hitter, singling home the winning run. Slowly he began crowding the other catchers toward the end of the bench, finally superseding Hemsley.

"Nobody has stolen on him this season," observed Pitcher Ray Starr. "I've seen a couple of runners halfway to second get nailed by his throws."

Lamanno never was too authoritative with the bat until this year. A week ago he led the National league. Today he is among the leaders with a .333 average.

GEORGIE ABRAMS GETS FREE SEAT

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(AP)—George Abrams, a leading contender for Tony Zale's middleweight boxing crown, will be back in the ring here June 12—but as a referee.

A first class specialist at the naval air station here, Abrams will be the third man for two preliminaries to the Tommy Gomez-Tommy Tucker benefit card.

Tribe Sneaks Out of Town

Leave After Bargain Bill With Browns.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Perhaps it's just as well the Cleveland Indians are moving east after their holiday bargain bill with the St. Louis Browns here today. The Tribe has dropped eight of its last nine starts but, worse yet, the fielding seems to have collapsed.

It may be that Tris Speaker has the answer. Baseball's great outfielder, who guided the Indians to their only pennant more than 20 years ago, calmly explains "They're a young team and they're not accustomed to playing together."

Lou Boudreau's boys have had the butter-fingered habit for several days. In yesterday's game at Detroit, the Tigers used 16 hits and three Cleveland errors to hand the Tribesmen a 14 to 3 walloping. The Indians manufactured 13 blows off Hal White but nearly all were wasted and Detroit pulled even with Cleveland in the games won and lost column and almost made it a deadlock for second place in the percentage.

First Baseman Les Fleming permitted the first Tiger tally by fumbling a grounder. After Detroit had chased Pitcher Al Smith to start a Cleveland parade of four moundsmen, Catcher Otto Denning's inaccurate throw hit a base runner in the back in the eighth and Ray Mack got the fever and made a wild throw to the plate after retrieving the ball.

That's the way it's been going. The other day Oscar Grimes replaced Mack because the latter wasn't hitting. With Mack's return to the starting lineup yesterday, Ray proved he's been picking up his teammates' miscues from the bench.

* * *

Chubby Dean, with a record of three and one, and Red Embree, who bowled over the Athletics in his only start, were expected to hurl for the Tribe today, with Bob Muncrief and Al Hollingsworth slated for the Browns.

IRISH CHANNEL HAS TURKEY BOWL GAME

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)— Come what may to football, the Irish Channel here will have its queen for next Thanksgiving day's Turkey Bowl game.

Turkey Bowl Promoter Allen Lacombe is going into the army June 11, and by way of clearing up his business, he's called for the queen to be elected June 7. The Thunderbolts and Skippy Aces are the teams for the bowl—and if their players get army calls, Lacombe hopes two service teams will keep up the tradition.

WOLVES OUSTED FROM BIG 10 TITLE

CHICAGO — (AP) — Michigan entered its final Big Ten baseball game of the season against Ohio State today without a chance to win the pennant outright.

The Wolverines, 1941 champs, were dropped, 3-2, by the Buckeyes yesterday for their second defeat of the season. A victory by Michigan today would put the school in a tie with Iowa for the championship with the possibility that Wisconsin might come along to share the title three ways.

Oh Now Wait A Minute Bub

This Al Blozis Seems To Be a Bit of a Man.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

NEW YORK—(AP)—Al Blozis, the big shot and discus man from Georgetown, can't get into the army or navy because his dimensions exceed maximum specifications, but his performance in the 66th annual intercollegiate A. A. A. track and field meet makes him a natural for the coast guard.

The way he tossed the 16-pound shot around Triborough stadium yesterday in the qualifying trials, the big fellow is a complete coastal defense unit in himself.

Even in that capacity, however, his size might continue to be a drawback, considering the time and effort needed to camouflage him adequately. So he'll settle for a defense job awaiting him in Clifton, N. J., plant.

Blozis, trained down until only 240 pounds clng to his six foot, six inch frame, heaved the 16-pound iron ball 55 feet, 4⅞ inches, smashing the meet record of 54 feet, 3 inches, he set last year.

His was the only record of the day as athletes from most of the association's 50 schools went through their paces in a series of 11 qualifying tests leading up to the finals in 16 events this afternoon.

Barney Ewell tied the meet standard in the 100-yard dash by winning his trial heat in 9 6 seconds. The Penn State speedster turned in the same time last year, equaling the record set by Frank Wykoff of Southern California in 1931.

Sam Snead Picked First

Craig Wood Selects Slammin' Man.

By GAYLE TALBOT

ATLANTIC CITY—(AP)—Craig Wood, the National Open golf champion who suffered a humiliating 7 and 6 beating from Jimmy Demaret in the quarter-finals of the P. G. A. title meet, was predicting that Demaret would slip a similar dose to Samuel Snead today and very probably go on to win the $2,000 first prize.

"I never saw better golf than he shot at me," the blond from Mamaroneck insisted. "They can call him a playboy, but he's no playboy out on that course right now. He's driving just as long as he wants to and his putting is something to see. He's playing now like he did back in 1940."

Wood referred, of course, to the winter when Demaret, fresh out of Houston, Texas, won virtually every money tournament in sight and wound up capturing the Masters' crown at Augusta, Ga. That was Jimmy's last important victory, though he won the Argentine Open title last winter. The extremely likeable Jim did too good a job of relaxing and celebrating after his big season. Probably more important, he lost his putting tough.

"Don't let that throw you off," Wood cautioned. "He's back now. I'll swear that against me yesterday he drove only as long as he wanted to. On the shorter holes he let me outdrive him, but when we hit a long one where it was important to reach the green in two he would let out a notch and leave me yards behind."

A final between Demaret and Corp. Jim Turnesa of Fort Dix tomorrow would be a natural. Jim is the next-to-youngest of the seven golfing Turnesa brothers of Elmsford, N. Y., and all he needed to do to reach the finals was defeat Byron Nelson today.

Nelson has been defeated, of course, but not often and not lately. He presently holds the Augusta Master's title—for the second time. He has won the National Open and the P. G. A. and is regarded by some competent critics, including Tommy Armour, as the greatest golfer who ever lived.

Still Turnesa might take him. Nelson has been complaining ever since the tournament opened at the Seaview club that his game was not "right," and he came close to proving it yesterday. Harry Cooper, the Minneapolis veteran, had him three down with only four holes to play Nelson pulled it out, shooting birdies on three of the last four holes to catch Cooper on the 36th and then defeat him on the 39th

Those who have watched Turnesa play here—especially those who saw him whittle down the great Ben Hogan yesterday by a score of 2 and 1—were willing to bet that Nelson couldn't spot him any such lead and live to tell the tale.

WHAT HO! THERE GOES EVANGELINE

LAFAYETTE, La —(AP)— The Evangeline league—so named because it operates in the section of Louisiana made famous by Longfellow—will fade from the baseball picture June 1.

President Wilmot Dalferes said decision of the Natchez team to withdraw forced the closing. The league started in 1934 with eight teams, entered this year with six, dropped later to four—and now Natchez is leaving.

Electric eels of Brazil generate such powerful charges that horses, fording a stream, are said to have been killed by the shocks.

Strong man of the crab family is the stone crab It can easily crack the shells of oysters, mussels and clams. In scientific tests these crabs have closed their pincers against an opposing strain of more than 60 pounds.

Periods of recreation and restful relaxation are more essential than ever these days, to keep us fit and ready for wartime demands. Fishing is one of the best sports for men or women because it can be enjoyed close to home, requires a minimum of equipment and does not require one to be an athlete for the greatest sport and enjoyment. Yuncker's offer North Central Ohio's most complete assortments of fine fishing tackle, and they'll gladly advise you in the proper selection of just the right things to fit your kind of fishing, as well as your pocket book.

Camels don't hold the record for going without water. Certain African desert rodents never drink during their entire lives! The dama gazelle, a rare animal of the Sahara, lives for years without drinking and there is some doubt that he ever drinks at all.

Most polar bears live permanently on ice—often hundreds of miles from the nearest land.

Black ducks, mallards, teal and pintails can vault or shoot straight up from the water—in sharp contrast to ducks like canvasback and scaup hich must taxi on the surface for some distance, paddling and flapping, to get into the air.

Tree feeding fish! That high leaper of the Florida lagoons, the tarpon, often jumps into the branches of mangrove trees along shore, dislodges the tiny crabs clinging there then drops back into the water to gobble up the juicy morsels!

BOSTON—(U.P.)—A soldier's farewell to his family is little different today than it was 2,300 years ago, as evidenced by a red-figured Greek vase on exhibition at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Panels on the reconstructed vase show an American draftee clasping his wife's hands as they take sorrowful leave. His mother stands nearby waiting for her son to say goodbye to her, and his father looks on with dilection and pride.

LAST CURTAIN FALLS ON LIFE OF BARRYMORE

Noted Actor Succumbs In Presbyterian Hospital At Hollywood.

condition give his physician cause for encouragement.

For days he was conscious only at intervals. Several days ago his doctor resorted to stimulants to keep his flagging heart going, but it was no use.

In a hospital ante-room when the end came was his daughter, Diana Barrymore, born of his marriage to Michael Strange, writer. In Mamaroneck, N. Y., it was announced that his sister, Actress Ethel Barrymore, would finish two stage performances today in Boston.

Barrymore once told a friend that every second of his life was an interesting experience, and his antics, on stage and off, bore him out. He was married four times, made fortunes and spent them, had a national reputation as a wit, and was regarded as one of the most competent actors of his time.

He was an unpredictable man, sometimes aloof and reserved, then roguish and jovial. He was a favorite of newsmen, to whom he was almost invariably cordial. When he was in Chicago in 1939 he was besieged by high school editors and reporters and student actors seeking interviews. Refusing to disappoint them, he held a press conference for 150, and answered questions for 50 minutes.

He reproved a hotel manager who tried to break it up, and later made a typical Barrymore exit after apologizing to the youngsters for taking so much of their time.

His co-radio performer, Rudy Vallee in a statement offered his tribute "to a great trouper—the greatest personality I have ever known."

Dr. Kerston also paid high tribute to his patient. He said:

"The fact that Mr. Barrymore survived this attack for more than a few days, instead of hours, following his collapse of Tuesday, May 19, is more of a tribute to the patient's amazing vitality than to any medical science practiced in his behalf.

"Perhaps this unexplained vitality had something in common with several other matchless qualities of this talented and courageous artist.

"As his physician, called on several other occasions to minister to him when his condition was, to say the least, critical and alarming, I was compelled to wonder at the recuperative faculties of the man and to marvel at a spirit and will that belied his 60 years.

"In exploring his physical history, and taking into account his chronic carelessness in getting proper rest or observing even a semblance of diet, I also became acquainted intimately with the man himself, his fine mind, his opinions, his philosophies.

"I found that his great personal strength and courage, even his foolhardiness, cloaked, in fact, the gentlest sort of soul, tolerant, generous, without conceit and almost childlike in honesty of thought.

"It is not for a medical practitioner to say that these qualities have any bearing whatsoever on a man's physical fortitude at the threshhold of death. Yet, who knows?"

Dr. Kirsten said Barrymore's last word was spoken to his brother Lionel yesterday, when he greeted him with a weak "hello."

He lapsed into unconsciousness and did not regain his faculties again.

Barrymore's last few years were his most hectic, most exciting, and therefore, most publicized.

His Caliban-Ariel romance with Elaine Barrie . . . His financial difficultes—a jurist put him on a $600 weekly allowance, assigned the remainder of his income to creditors; then raised John's share to $700 for good behavior . . . his satirizing of his own life on stage, screen and radio . . . and his frequent bouts with death itself frequently stole headlines from vastly more important, if less hilarious, news.

Barrymore seldom missed a chance to rib himself, and his antics kept him well suplied with fresh material.

Nearing his 54th birthday in 1936, he told an interviewer:

"I expect to live to be 188. But when my time come I want to go like my uncle, John Drew. He died like a gent. His death truly was artistic."

Four times married and four times divorced, John quipped after Elaine Barrie cut their marital ties in 1940 and was awarded use of the name Elaine Barrymore, but without the prefix "Mrs."

"There are so many Barrymores. I have a high regard for Elaine's talent and it might clutter up her career to be mixed up with other actresses."

He also suggested the divorce might lead to friendship with Elaine. "I've really got to know my wives better after we are divorced," he explained.

The fact the once-great lover's name had not been linked with any woman's since his divorce from Elaine was contradictory to his assertion:

"I've been in love heaven knows how many times—I'll never stop falling in love. Women to me are as mysterious and charming and wonderful as they were the day I opened my eyes and realized they were on earth."

John joked about his financial troubles, which included suits totalling $100,000 in 1937 and the sale, by court order, of his famous yacht, Infanta. John said it cost $150,000 to build in 1929 and he valued it at $100,000. E P. Lawson, New York manufacturer, bought it for $77 500 at the court sale.

"My life," quipped the great profile, "seems to be full of deductions."

In 1940, John bought his way out of the cast of "My Dear Children," which was paying him $1,000 a week, on a percentage basis, to go into the movies at $5,000 a week—for the benefit of his creditors. The latter readily agreed in court to the dicker. John paid $15,000 for his release from the stage.

It was about that time, too, that John's allowance was upped from $600 to $700 a week by a sympathetic jurist. John had sworn off hard liquor—it never was any secret that he often used it freely—and was doing right well generally by his creditors, whose claims at that time amounted to $68 000.

Although Barrymore was in and out of hospitals about every four months the last three years—his liver and kidneys continually were acting up because of all the liquor he had consumed—he never lost his zest for life.

"Life is worth living I ought to know. I've done a lot of it. Every split second was an exciting experience," he said. "To be hit and knocked flat by a great tragedy gives me the capacity to be lifted to the skies by a great happiness."

He retired once, or thought he had, but "the little filly, Elaine, made a race horse of me again." Quickly he climbed back to stardom.

John is survived by his brother, Lionel, his sister, Ethel, and three children, Diana, and Dolores Ethel Mae Barrymore, 12, and John Blythe Barrymore, 10, born of his marriage to Dolores Costello. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

upon him near Prague Wednesday, there was no confirmation.

An Italian news agency dispatch from Prague just before last midnight said he was in critical condition

(A BBC report quoting Stockholm sources, heard in New York by CBS, said Heydrich had received a blood transfusion.)

As the price in lives demanded from the Czechs mounted, Heydrich's Gestapo agents rounded up scores of other hostages and the Moscow radio said 200 were in Nazi custody and in danger of their lives.

A deadline for the registration of all Czech males, ordered after the shooting of the Nazi administrator for Bohemia and Moravia as he was motoring to Berlin, passed at midnight.

Aid War Effort, Plea To Ohioans

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Ohioans were called upon today as they honored the dead of previous wars to aid the nation's effort in the current war to the best of their ability.

Gov. John W. Bricker made the plea in a Memorial day message to Buckeye citizens in the armed forces, in war industries and on the home front.

He asked Ohioans to "dedicate themselves to the task of retaining the frontiers of liberty, freedom and happiness which our heroic dead gained for our nation."

"All should pay homage," he added, "to the memory of the brave Americans who throughout the years have given their lives so that the United States might retain in its self-government and, especially this year, to honor the nation's war heroes in the present and past conflicts."

Ohio's observance of the day was generally more "stay-at-home" than usual. War industries remained in production and most federal offices, including postoffices, were open State and local government offices and financial institutions were closed

105, He Recalls Service For U. S.

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Today, as America reviews her military past, a short, grizzled old man in a blue coat heavy with medals and reunion badges recalled service to Uncle Sam which began four years before the Civil war.

William D. Welch, who will be 105 years old next Sept. 1, served in the navy yards at Brooklyn and Boston for four years before the Civil war and fought during the whole of the war in the Second Corps of the army of the Potomac and the Third Corps' 140th Pennsylvania volunteer infantry.

When the war was over, he served four more years in the navy yards.

"My father was a painter and a navy man, so I became a painter and a navy man," he explained.

For today's Memorial parade, Welch planned to wear his old blue coat and a blue cap with the Third Corps insignia and to carry a 13-star flag which has been in his family for 135 years.

Welch, a native of Philadelphia, came to his daughter's home on the banks of the Little Miami river east of here a year ago. A travelers' aid agent thought the old man was lost as he wandered about Cincinnati's big Union terminal, and against violent protests had him taken to General hospital.

He chuckled as he recalled how they put him to bed to rest and located his relations while he "raised ned" because at the hospital he was separated from his trousers and a moneybelt containing about $2,000.

Sister Ethel To Keep Own Show Going

BOSTON—(AP)—Ethel Barrymore, starring here in the play, "The Corn Is Green," will go on with the show today despite the death of her brother, John.

Her press representative said she was "terribly cut up" at the news, but that she would appear in today's matinee and evening performances—the last scheduled for the show until fall.

Miss Barrymore gave no comment to the press on her brother's death. Her plans beyond tonight were not divulged.

PARADE TOPS MEMORIAL TO SERVICE MEN

March Through Down Town And to Cemetery Exercises To Start at 2:15.

be tolled and flags raised to full mast. The afternoon's exercises were to be ushered in by the ringing of the city's old fire bell by Fire Chief C. J. Seeburger at 2 p. m.

The many veterans' organizations, musical units, and other groups which will participate in the parade were to assemble at Park avenue and Mulberry—one division extending south on Mulberry, another north on the same street, and the third west on Park.

The line of march is to be east on Park from Mulberry to Main, south on Main to Chestnut, and east on Chestnut to the cemetery. There the final exercises were to be conducted following the parade, with Rev. G. E. Swoyer as orator of the day.

Weather permitting, a squadron of five planes of the Civil Air Patrol was to fly over the downtown section during the parade in special tribute to the two soldier dead from Mansfield in the new world war—Lieut. Robert P. Spreng and Capt. Elmer L. Parsel.

Like in most cities, there are no longer any civil war veterans to march in Mansfield's parade. The city's last veteran of that war, William Hammet, died on Feo 15. 1941. Richland county's last civil war veteran, William Henry Hoover, died in Shelby last Jan. 29 In Cleveland, there are four still living of the 9,000 boys in blue who left the city in 1861 to fight with the union forces.

With traveling curtailed by tire rationing and the anticipated gasoline rationing, it was expected that the most popular holiday pastime will be outings at parks in or near Mansfield.

Liberty Park pool was to open for the summer today. Golf courses near the city expected their big week-end of the season.

The week-end will not be a holiday for many Mansfield plant workers, as most firms with war production contracts will continue operation, at least on the war orders.

ated several settlements and slain 700 Germans, the midnight communique said.

The situation before Kharkov, Nazi-held steel center 400 miles south of Moscow, was again covered by a generalization: "Nothing of significance took place in other sectors of the front."

Hundreds of German dead, however, were reported lying on the crater-pocked plains as a result of the battle of attrition instituted by Soviet Marshal Semeon Timoshenko May 12.

(Following up a London Daily Mail report that Adolf Hitler had assumed personal direction of German operations on the Kharkov front, the British radio quoted a Moscow broadcast as saying the area was comparatively quiet, but Red army men "are still snatching villages from the Germans.")

CHAPTER XXIII

"The first one is to find Sweet Genevieve. Or to find that she is not alive, if that is how it is. It will, I think, be wise to try for the girl, through the father. Do you know where he'd be likely to hang out?"

"For a guess, I'd say Chicago."

"A harder place to find people in than New York, I understand."

"So I'm told. If you can't find her in Chicago, you probably can't find her anywhere."

Fleming Stone looked at his young client, with a half-vacant stare.

"Brand," he said, "I'm in a snarl."

"As how?"

"I can't go to Chicago now, nor anywhere else. I'm on a job. I'm getting you out of this place, and I have a new trail just opening up. I can't go away now!"

"Have you really got a new way to look? Look it, then! Don't think of the money; just think of breaking my chains, of loosening my fetters!"

"All right, boy," Stone said. "I'll stay here and get you back in civilization. And I'll work Chicago, too. I've never before pulled a string at both ends, but we'll try it! It may give us a break."

"It fair takes my breath away just to think of getting out of this! Can you do it?"

"I will do it, whether I can or not. My new hunch will see me through—it must! Brand, take another think about that night. You feel pretty sure it was Haynes who said Al-ma, as he came in the room? Al, as in Al Smith."

"Yes, I know it was."

"But you don't think he killed her?"

"He most positively did not. He might kill a burglar, or he might do in a chap who'd beaten him at golf, but not a girl!"

"All right! That leaves Murray and Delevan. Your choice?"

"Of those two? Well, then, Murray. Delevan is too aesthetic. Artists don't go round killing people."

"All right, lad; take care of yourself. I'm going on some errands."

Stone telephoned and then went to his own apartment where he was joined by a young man, Peter Cobb, a protege of Stone's who had already proved himself a good worker.

"Are you game for a dangerous sortie into the wilds of Chicago?" the detective asked.

"I am that! The wilder the better."

"But you will have to be smart as a steel trap, and wise and canny and dexterous beside"

"I am already half way there!"

"Then listen. You know of the Webb affair? The missing heiress and all that?"

"Yes. You want me to find one? And in Chicago?"

"Or points more or less adjacent. It's the father of the missing girl that you're after."

"A missing father of a missing girl! What does she look like?"

"Seems to me Bliss said he had a picture of her. Why didn't he give it to me? You telephone his office, Cobb, and ask him if he has one. Tell him I'll send a messenger for it. You do that while I look over these letters!"

After a few moments Cobb said that Bliss would send the picture right over, but it wasn't much good as it was a baby picture.

"No, that can't help us. I think you'd better work something like this All we really know is, that the Webb girl eloped with the Wiley man in 1917. She was then 27 years old. They went to Chicago to live. Now, suppose you start out by getting hold of old Chicago telephone books for 1917 and on, and see if you can dig up John Wiley. If you can't, then go to the post office or the city Hall or Information Bureau, if any—or see what you can think up yourself, in the way of finding him."

"Shall I fly there?"

"Yes; do everything you can to hurry matters. Keep me informed, telephone me here, every move you make. And be where I can get you at 7 a. m and 7 p. m. unless you strike something desperate. You are to look for Wiley and also learn all you can about the girl She was born in '18 that makes her 22 now. But whether she's in Chicago or Timbuktoo, nobody knows."

* * *

A messenger brought the picture of Genevieve Wiley from Bliss, it showed a mother and daughter, the little one about 2 years old

"Small good in that!" Cobb said, but Fleming Stone caught a hint.

"Look, Peter, it isn't much, but don't forget it. See, they are both laughing, both have front teeth, slightly separated. Well, if a girl comes up to you and says she's Jenny Wiley, you make her laugh, and then you can tell whether she is or not."

"I thought I was to look for a man. What are his teeth like?"

"I don't know. You are looking for John Wiley, but as a lead to his daughter."

"I've seen more promising outlooks. But I'm proud to have you send me. Might Wiley be dead?"

"He may well be, especially as he hasn't shown up at the home of his deceased father-in-law. But he was forbidden the house. The wife, I understand is dead."

"Maybe he married again."

"Quite likely. Run along, now, and good luck to you."

Peter Cobb ran along.

Stone again visited the McCleod apartment. Hugh was not at home, so he asked Foo Chow to send Dickson, the valet, to him.

"Is Linda, the maid, here?" Stone asked, when Dickson appeared.

"Yes, sir; she is still attending to Mrs. McCleod's wardrobe."

"Has she the jewels in her keeping?"

"Yes, sir"

"Well, Dickson, I want that bangle that Mrs. McCleod was wearing the night she died, the one Hugh is reported to have given Emmy later."

"You want to take it away, Mr. Stone?"

"Yes. Dickson. I will bring it back—no, I'll leave it for you at your brother's shop. If Mr. McCleod should ask for it, tell him I took it."

"Very well, I'll get it."

Dickson went away, and returned with the bangle, wrapped in white tissue paper.

"It will be at your brother's place for you, this afternoon, by or before three," Stone promised.

The detective called at two of the largest jewelry shops in the city, both disclaimed any knowledge of the bangle and were certain it had been bought elsewhere.

Stone prepared to call at some of the diamond brokers. These offices numbered many of the fashionable aristocracy among their clients.

After three unsuccessful attempts Fleming Stone found a broker who recognized the trinket.

"Yes, I sold that bangle about a week or ten days ago," he said.

"Who bought it from you?"

Stone learned that Van Dyke Haynes had bought it and paid for it.

"That is all," said the detective, "and thank you, I assure you, your name will not be mentioned in connection with the matter."

Then Stone stopped into a friend's office, called a messenger and dispatched to Dickson's brother the bangle that Haynes had given to Alma.

Peter Cobb, a handsome, clever youth, boarded an airplane for Chicago on an errand for Fleming Stone. He knew he had a difficult assignment, but if he succeeded, it might mean further work with the great detective. Who knew where that might lead?

He established himself in a big hotel. As a start he consulted the telephone book in his room. But no John Wiley was listed in it. He went to the post office, but was unable to learn anything of his quarry there. A few other places of possible information proved equally futile He went to the telephone company's headquarters and succeeded in getting access to a file of back number telephone directories

Some of the directories for the years of the early married life of John Wiley, listed his name, but the telephone numbers and addresses changed. Cobb copied all the addresses.

No telephone number was listed in Wiley's name for the last few years, and Cobb concluded the man had moved from Chicago, or his fortunes had fallen so low that he had no business address

Patiently Cobb called at the addresses he had found; except for scattering and contradictory information, he learned nothing of Wiley's present residence.

But at last he learned that Wiley's wife, Helen, conducted a smart dress shop in a fashionable section. So, he concluded, Wiley had married again, and if still alive, was being supported by his wife.

He went to the dress shop and interviewed Mrs. Wiley. John Wiley, Cobb had ascertained, would now be about 50. Mrs. Helen Wiley apparently was in her middle thirties.

Though polite, she was not responsive to his pleasantries, and seemed to resent his questions.

"I am anxious to see your husband," he said. "Will you tell me where I can find him?"

"Why do you want to see him?"

"Because of his connection with the family of Jason Webb," said Cobb "His first wife, I am told, was Webb's daughter"

"Yes, she was. But I am his wife now, and anything you have to say about the Webb affairs you can say to me."

"Very well," Cobb spoke genially. "Tell me, does Mr. Wiley's daughter live with you?"

The woman looked at him warily.

"She doesn't live with us now," she said. "I think she lives—I don't know where she lives."

Cobb didn't believe this. "If there is any chance of Mr. Wiley getting any of the Webb money, it would be through his daughter. Do you know the terms of his will?"

"I do not, and you do not either. He left no will."

"How do you know that?"

"My husband told me so."

"He is interested in the matter then?"

"How can he be, when there is no will, and when he is forbidden to go to the Webb house?"

"Why is that? He was the husband of Webb's daughter."

"Well, he isn't now. And I want him to keep away from the whole business. He'll only get into trouble."

"Perhaps you are wise. Now, Mrs. Wiley, I want you to tell me where John Wiley is, or tell why you are unwilling to let me know that."

Helen Wiley lost her temper, stamped her foot and ordered the young investigator out of her shop.

Scenting some deeper trouble than her indignation at being questioned by a stranger, Cobb went away thoughtfully. He telephoned Stone, who praised him for what he had accomplished, and told him to go next to police headquarters and get their assistance.

Cobb eagerly obeyed, but his success was not immediate. John Wiley's name had appeared on their jail list. The police would continue their investigation, and would let Cobb know results.

Baffled, but hopeful, Cobb tried again to get some facts about the daughter, Jenny Wiley. The lady of the dress shop gave him another interview, but the only information he gleaned was that Jenny Wiley had left the paternal roof when she was about 14.

"Were you then married to Wiley?"

"Yes; his first wife died a year before we were married. But—"

"But what?"

"Oh, nothing."

Peter Cobb had an inspiration. After several broad hints from the owner of the dress shop he realized she might be amenable to financial argument. So he hinted that if she chose to be more garrulous, she would lose nothing by it, and perhaps might gain.

This sort of talk Helen Wiley understood. Though Cobb admitted that he could make no definite promises, he was sure that there would be reward forthcoming for definite information about Genevieve.

"All I can tell you is," Helen began, "that the girl and I couldn't get along together. I told Wiley that she must leave the house or I must. He is a poor shrimp, and I was supporting him anyway; so he put the girl out to board with a woman he knew, here in Chicago I suppose he paid her board. I know I didn't. I never heard of the girl again, and I don't think he ever did. But I'm pretty sure she landed on her feet somehow, for she was smart as a steel trap. She had a knack of painting little doodads and she sold them to specialty shops."

"What was the name of the woman she boarded with?"

"Mrs. Terrill. I heard that somebody took a shine to her, some rich woman, and that one took Jenny to live with her. It may be true, for I know Wiley couldn't keep on paying her board because he had no funds."

Cobb sighed. "Well," he said, "tell me where to look for Mrs. Terrill, and I'll do my best to get you a bit of recompense. Where is Wiley?"

"Well," she said, with an air of surrender, "if I must tell you—he's in jail."

"Are you sure? I've asked the police, and they have no record of it."

Mrs. Wiley smiled. "My dear boy, you don't know all the tricks of the trade. John Wiley has a real talent for getting into jail, but he seldom goes there over his own name."

"Oh, then you mean he is locked up, but not as John Wiley?"

"That's exactly what I mean, but I can't give you his assumed name because I don't know it. He doesn't use the same one twice. He is the most shiftless good-for-nothing that ever lived!"

"Why did you marry him? A smart woman like you!"

"Oh, it was nine years ago He was good-looking then, and he had fascinating ways. I've left him two or three times, but he drags me back. He is—"

"Where is he in jail? How can I find out what name he is using? It will be really worth your while to let me a him!"

"But I don't know. There's only one person who might know. And that's Ben Monk. He's John's pal, and I think they keep in pretty close touch."

Memorial Day

In Defense of Freedom—

We must guard against division among ourselves and among all the United Nations. We must be particularly vigilant against racial discrimination in any of its ugly forms. Hitler will try again to breed mistrust and suspicion between one individual and another, one group and another, one race and another, one government and another. He will try to use the same technique of falsehood and rumor-mongering with which he divided France from Britain. He is trying to do this even now; but he will find a unity, a unity of will and purpose against him which will preserve until the destruction of all his black designs upon the freedom and people of the world.

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY

WHAT GOES ON? I'VE BEEN DIGGING UP ALL THE TAX RECORDS AND DATA ON THAT EX-SUGAR FACTORY OLD ORPHAN OLIVER CALLS HIS RESIDENCE ... WHAT'S HAPPENED? DID SOMEONE STRIKE OIL OR FIND A GOLD MINE THERE?
OFFICE OF COUNTY RECORDS
NO ... THE REASON FOR THE RECORD SEARCHING IS THE BIG BOSS OF THE PARTY IS TRYING TO GET OLD OLIVER'S SCALP
BUT WHY? OLIVER IS A HARMLESS OLD BIRD
MAYBE THE BIG BOSS THINKS OLD OLIVER IS GETTING TOO POPULAR WITH OUR WELL-TRAINED VOTERS ... THAT'S MY GUESS ... BUT OUR JOB IS TO OBEY ORDERS AND KEEP OUR TRAPS SHUT
DARRELL McCLURE
OH, ANNIE, I'M SO GLAD I CAN LIVE IN THIS ORPHAN ASYLUM ... MR. OLIVER IS SO KIND TO ALL US ORPHANS
PLEASE, ELLA ... MR. OLIVER SEZ THIS IS NOT AN ORPHAN ASYLUM ... THIS IS A PRIVATE RESIDENCE AN' EVERYONE THAT LIVES HERE IS HIS GUEST
THAT PAINT MAKES THE BUILDING LOOK LIKE A BIG HUNK OF CAKE COVERED WITH WHITE FROSTING
G'WAN ... THAT'S NOT PAINT ... IT'S JUST WHITEWASH!
WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE? IT LOOKS LIKE PAINT
I HEARD MR. OLIVER SAY WHITE-WASH IS A WHOLE LOT CHEAPER
MR. OLIVER SEZ PAINT IS A MIXTURE OF OIL AN' LEAD ... AN' THE COUNTRY NEEDS IT FOR BUILDING BATTLE-SHIPS AN' OTHER STUFF TO FIGHT THE WAR WITH
DARRELL McCLURE
... SO, WHEN FOLKS USE WHITEWASH INSTEAD OF PAINT, THEY'RE HELPIN' TO WIN THE WAR AN' SAVE MONEY AT THE SAME TIME
OH, ANNIE ... I NEVER SAW AN APPLE ORCHARD BEFORE ... IT LOOKS SO VERY LOVELY AND SMELLS SO PERFUMY
BUT I DON'T SEE ANY APPLES, AND I JUST LOVE APPLES
I GUESS EVERYBODY I KNOW LIKES APPLES ... I LOVE 'EM
I BETCHA AN APPLE TREE IS THE SMARTEST TREE IN THE WHOLE WORLD ... FIRST, IT'S ALL COVERED WITH LOVELY PINK AN' WHITE BLOSSOMS ... THEN PRETTY SOON THE BLOSSOMS CHANGE TO PRETTY GREEN LEAVES ...
DARRELL McCLURE
THEN THE GREEN LEAVES CHANGE TO LITTLE GREEN APPLES ... THEN THE LITTLE GREEN APPLES BECOME BIG, RED APPLES ... THE BIG, RED APPLES CHANGE INTO APPLE PIES, APPLE CIDER AN' APPLE SAUCE ... 'SEEMS LIKE A FAIRY TALE GROWIN' UP OUTA THE GROUND!
HONEST, HANNA ... IT'S GRAND TO BE A FARMER! FIRST, THERE'S NOTHIN' ON YOUR FARM BUT DIRT ... THEN YOU PLANT SOME TINY LITTLE SEEDS ...
PRETTY SOON TEENY-WEENY LITTLE SPROUTS COME UP ... THEN THEY KEEP GETTIN' BIGGER AN' BIGGER ... AN' WHEN HARVEST-TIME COMES YOU GOT ALL KINDS OF SWELL STUFF TO EAT
I THINK VEGETABLES ARE AWFUL FUNNY ... CORN GROWS STRAIGHT UP ... CARROTS GROW STRAIGHT DOWN ... AN' PEAS GROW SIDEWAYS ...
DARRELL McCLURE
A CENTURY PLANT TAKES A HUNDRED YEARS TO GROW AN' A MUSHROOM POPS UP QUICK AS A JACK-IN-A-BOX ... HONEST, I THINK OLD MOTHER NATURE HAS A GREAT SENSE OF HUMOR
YOU KNOW, ANNIE, I WISH I HAD BEEN HERE WHEN THE VICTORY FARMS WERE STARTED ... IT MUST MAKE YOU FEEL PROUD TO SEE THE RESULT OF ALL THE WORK YOU DID ON YOUR FARM
HONEST, I DIDN'T DO HARDLY ANYTHING ... JUST AN HOUR A DAY AN' IT WAS LOTSA FUN ... BUT JUST THE SAME, IT MAKES ME FEEL GLAD ALL OVER EVERY TIME I LOOK AT ALL THE FARMS WE KIDS MADE
AT FIRST I THOUGHT IT WAS JUST SOME KIND OF A GAME ... BUT WHEN I SEE ALL THE TRUCK-LOADS OF STUFF WE GREW, I CAN'T HELP FEELIN' A LITTLE BIT PROUD AN' SNOOTY
DARRELL McCLURE
... AN' WHEN I THINK OF ALL THE MILLIONS AN' MILLIONS OF LITTLE KIDS DOIN' THE SAME THING ALL OVER THE COUNTRY, I WANNA JUMP UP AN' DOWN AN' HOLLER, "HURRAY, HURRAY"
PLEASE, HANNA, DON'T LAFF AT THE MULES, IT WILL HURT THEIR FEELIN'S ... IT'S NOT THEIR FAULT, 'CAUSE THEY DON'T LOOK FANCY
BUT THEY LOOK SO FUNNY ... I THINK MULES WERE JUST MADE FOR PEOPLE TO LAUGH AT HA, HA, HA
NO, THEY WEREN'T, HANNA ... MR. OLIVER SEZ MULES WERE MADE TO DO ALL THE HARD, UNPLEASANT WORK OF THE WORLD AN' ARE NEVER PRAISED OR PETTED BY ANYBODY ...
EVERYONE LOVES CATS AN' DOGS AN' HORSES AN' SAYS, 'AREN'T THEY GRAND' ... BUT I ALWAYS FEEL SORRY FOR THE POOR MULES ... IT'S NOT THE MULE'S FAULT, IF HE'S NOT AS CUTE AN' PRETTY AS A CIRCUS PONY
